

THE POST.

MIDDLEBURG, PENN., JUNE 18, 1897.
CROUSE & BENDER, Proprietors.

Remedies.

Coughs of Hogs.—Give half a pint of lard molten in a pint of new milk. Put the lard and milk in a tin dish, set on the stove and heat until the lard is melted. Administer warm. This will in most cases effect a cure in short time.

Throat Distemper in Horses.—Take devil's bit, or wild turnip; if green, grate a small one fine; if dry, a heaped spoonful, mix it with wet bran or oats. This repeatedly given, has never been known to fail. It is also a certain cure for a cough.

Lampas in Horses.—Colic effected with the lampas may have the palate lanced, which relieves tension of the swollen part. Where there is not much swelling, apply to the palate a solution of alum—a teaspoonful to half a pint of water.

Brushes or Sores on a Horse.—Boil smart weed in chamber lye: after boiling put in a little soft soap. Wash with warm water, two or three times a day. If the weather be cold, dry with a hot brick or cover with cloth.

Scruff on the Legs of Poultry.—The following receipt has been found an effective remedy: 20 grains carbonate of soda; 1 ounce of lard, 1 drachm sulphur. Applied occasionally to the legs till a healthy appearance is restored.

Founder in Horses.—A large tablespoonful of pulverized alum, and a teaspoonful of pulverized saltpeter mixed. Moisten the dose and administer it by pulling out the tongue and placing the spoon as far back in the mouth as possible. Feed carefully and exercise gently every day. Repeat the dose every other day for several days.

Mange in Horses.—All the many parts of the horse's body should be rubbed with an equal mixture of soft soap and kerosene, and in twenty-four hours it should be washed off with warm water and the horse carefully dried and blanketed afterwards. If one application is not sufficient, a second one should be made, but eight or ten days should intervene between each application.

When you perceived your horses inclined to rub their manes and tails, feed them a little oil meal, say from one to two quarts a day for a week or ten days, and at the same time make good brine, as warm as you can bear you hand in it, and wash the scaly substance out of the mane and tail, and mix about a tablespoonful of lard, a teaspoonful of powder, and rub it in well about the roots of the mane and tail.

Blood Spavin and Thoroughpin.—Blood spavin disease is a brutal enlargement, or an increase in the secretion of the joint oil, causing distension of the capsular ligament which surrounds the joint, causing puffy swellings on the front and inside of the joint, but rarely causing lameness.

Thoroughpin is the same disease, on a more extensive scale, causing the enlargement to extend through the joint, from one side to another. The only successful treatment which we have found, with a few exceptions is cold water compresses, placed upon the joint in such a manner as to press upon the swollen parts, and retain them there for six or eight weeks, by means of a leather sock, made to fit the joint; the compress to be changed every day. Old muslin cloth is the best material to use.

Wind Galls.—A gall is a swelling that appears on each side of the back above the fetlock, and injures the sale of many fine horses. Many persons puncture them, which is a wrong thing, as it often produces an incurable lameness. Procure the best kerosene oil possible, and bathe the spot two or three times a day, until you see the gall has diminished. Dip the end of your finger in the oil, and rub it in well. Then put a tight bandage of cloth around the gall. Be careful and do not let the oil spread more than is necessary, for if allowed to run down the fetlocks, it will cause a bad sore. If the gall be a bad one, and the oil should cause a sore, heal with green ointment.—American Stock Journal.

Growing Peanuts.

Plant in hills three feet apart every way at corresponding time. The peanut grows double, and in planting, should be broken in two pieces; the two pieces being enough for one hill.

Nothing more is needed, save clean cultivation. Do this work thoroughly until the blossoms appear, which must be covered lightly with earth from time to time. It will be readily seen that the abundance of the crop will depend upon the extent and carefulness with which the work of covering the vines, after they have come into blossom, is done, as no blossoms produce fruit save those that are covered, as described. Neglecting this is the cause of many of the reported failures in growing peanuts.

In harvesting, if your ground is loose, the vines are cut and are easily lifted and stripped of their nuts, which should be spread upon the barn floor or other place to dry.

A double handful of seed will produce a bushel or more of nuts, than which nothing will please the children more—and "men are children of larger growth"—and make cheery the long water evenings.
