THE DELUGE.

A DEATH SCENE OF THE BIBLE. The ark is completed, that unparalleled vessel which carried a cargo more precious than the cargoes of all other ships put together, for it carried the fortunes of the world for half a year.

THE DELUGE.

There is a solemn pause of seven days. No doubt the lookers-on—the inhabitants round about—the old patriarch with his monstrous menagerie in his monstrous ship. The seven days had still been added to the 120 years, as a further time for the people to repent, but they hardened themselves the more as they cried, 'Where is the sign of the deluge?'

Young Hopetun's Letter to his Mother.

A youngster attending school in Paducah has written his mother the following characteristic letter: 'DEAR MOTHER: I got another licking yesterday, but I had on three pair of pants, and it didn't hurt much. I was licked because I put six pins in Mr. —'s chair. I knew they would not stick him, and I made a bet that they would not. Mr. — was so mean and hard that pins could not go in. I won the bet which was a dog. He is a good dog, and I'm training him to bite old 'Hardsides', as we call him, some night when he comes home after dark, and if Zack is as good after him as he is after rats, I won't get licked any more. Zack and I killed three cats Sunday, though I was at Sunday school and church all day, and it wasn't a good day for cats either. This makes the third licking I got this week. One was because I had a bottle of milk in my room, and the other was because I wrote a composition on negroes that old 'Hardsides' didn't like. I said that a negro was a dark subject to write on. It was like a dark African going down a dark cellar on a dark night without a light to look for a black cat that was not there. Old 'Hardsides' stopped me and then licked me for that. Send me some more of them pins. I made a good trade with some of them. If you will send me five dollars I will stop all my bad habits except cursing and swearing and chewing and drinking and one or two others. You had better make the trade. Give my love to little Julie, and tell her to send me that little fiddle I left in the old trunk. Your affectionate son, BILLY.

condition with the Pennsylvania Central Railroad Company. How he and his patron, Thomas A. Scott, rapidly rose to eminence and wealth in the service of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company—the former becoming Vice President and the latter its Superintendent—the history of the great corporation shows. Mr. Carnegie, after attaining the position of Superintendent of the road some years ago, resigned this position and established the Union Iron Works at Pittsburgh. To his business ability may be ascribed much of the financial success of this great railroad corporation—probably now the wealthiest railroad company in the world. Under the administration of Andrew Carnegie the road gained the proud reputation of being the best managed railroad in the United States. We are glad that the Union Pacific is likely to fall into such good hands. There is nothing mean or illiberal about such men. Their policy is far seeing, comprehensive and judicious. The will virtually make the Kansas and Union Pacific one grand double-track line, and the general interests of the people of the Territories will be subserved and not crippled. Mr. Carnegie is still a young man, thirty-four or five, modest and unassuming in manner, and we believe unmarried.
