Col. David Stanton.

From the Beaver County Press.]

We observe that a few scribblers in different parts of the State have set themselves to work to keep alive the nonsensical story that our townsman, Dr Stanton, "entered the service as a contract surgeon under an appointment from his uncle, Secretary Stanton." This is such a silly lie that it seems hardly worth our while to make any note of it, for everybody knows or ought to know—especially those fellows who are trying to make a noise about it—that a contract surgeon was not appointed by anybody but was simply a physician employed by agreement by the surgeon general or the Medical Director of a department, at from $50 to $100 dollars per month, without rank or other emolument—an eminently insignificant and undesirable position which grew out of the necessities of the second year of the war, and only sought for by the excessively impudicuous. The Secretary of War had no more to do with the appointment of contract surgeons than any other high officer in the Government. Dr Stanton never applied for or held any such place. He entered the service as a surgeon of the First regiment of Pennsylvania cavalry, early in 1861, under a commission from the Governor, Andrew G. Curtis, months before E. M. Stanton was thought of as a Secretary of War. He served with his regiment in the field for eighteen months, when, actuated by the same desire for promotion that was frequently felt by other soldiers, he applied for the position of surgeon of U. S. volunteers. Having passed the usual examination before the board constituted for that purpose, he was duly appointed by the President. In this position he served with honor and credit, and was twice brevetted for distinguished services. But the fact that this "contract surgeon" story has so far been raked up against Dr Stanton is pretty good evidence that his opponents are utterly at a loss to find anything to injure him personally or professionally, as a citizen or a soldier. He can well afford to take their abuse good naturedly.

George O. Evans.

The Evans defalcation is had enough to be sure, but it is not half as bad as a lot of Democratic shrewdery to make believe. They are raising a great cloud of dust, and make a tremendous noise and clatter, and in the confusion they hope to run away from the presence of the fearful corruption and villainies that have been fastened upon their party. It seems manifest that Evans has been defrauding the State largely, that he claims extravagant compensation for the sums he has collected from the United States, and has the impudence and dishonesty to claim nearly two hundred thousand dollars more as commissions on sums which there is no longer a doubt were adjudicated and allowed years before he became the special agent of the State.

But while this is so, mark what more deserves to be said in the same connection, and mark the difference between the Republican and Democratic parties. The same thing cannot be said of the Democratic stealings which have recently been exposed, and which are truly colossal in comparison with Evans' pilfering. This attempt to steal the funds of the State, if done by a Republican, was also detected and exposed by a Republican, and an office holder, and exposure was made in a Republican newspaper, and was endorsed by the whole Republican press of the State. The enemies of the Republican party cannot point to a single instance when it was attempted to shield or cover up this fraud, or to defend the guilty party. Earnest and imperative demands were made upon the State officers for a prompt and thorough investigation of the whole matter, and for the trial and punishment of the guilty parties, no matter whom they might be. The dirty thing is now undergoing investigation before the proper officials, and we have no doubt that it will not stop short of a restoration to the State of all it is entitled to, or the punishment of the guilty.

Now the fact of Evans being a Republican proves that there are villains in the party, and that they sometimes get into position prejudicial to the interests of the people. On the other hand, the fact that he was exposed by Republicans, his thefts published by Republican press, and investigated by Republican officials, proves that his crimes are not crimes of the party, and that the party is the first to demand retribution, no matter whom it may hurt. Compare this with the history of the Tammany frauds. Where are the Democratic newspapers that have denounced this pilfering of millions, and their use to enrich thieves and to corrupt elections? Where are the Democrats?

officials of New York who have taken steps to ferret out the rascals and to punish them? Echo answers, where? Let Democratic sheets denounce the conduct of Evans as earnestly and as honestly as do Republicans; but had they not better hesitate, in view of the crimes proved upon the whole Democratic municipal government of New York City, before charging the responsibility of his sins upon the Republican party.—Chambersburg Repository.

Try Us on Our Record.

Facts are so much better than fancies, works are so much better than words, that there ought to be little wonder at the steady progress of the Republican party in the face of its own internal difficulties. The absence of all ebullience in the modern Democracy is not less the fruit of its own want of genuine principles than of the repeated successes of its antagonist. There are two classes embarrassed by this state of things: first, those in our own ranks who allow personal feeling to control their actions; second those on the adverse side, who expect to win through our dissensions. While the Republicans stand firm, prove their fidelity to their faith, and fulfil their pledges, they can afford to rest upon the results as upon a rock, indulging a due forbearance to their disaffected associates, and defying the machinations of their adversaries. Our strength is not simply in numbers and majorities, but in our general ability for government and in the unassailable integrity of our record. We do not invoke support by promises of what we shall do. We demand it by the fair showing of what we have done. Perhaps nothing so vindicates Republicanism as the concessions of the Democrats. The best of them yield to the new amendments of the Constitution. The worst of them dare no longer attack the systematic reduction of the national debt. The best of them frankly yield to the abolition of slavery. The worst of them dare not ask for its restoration. All of them, without exception, are dumfounded before the fact that the present national currency is the most perfect ever known in the United States. None of them, save perhaps the foreigner resident in New York, who are interested only in the profits upon imports, make free trade an issue, even in the midst of their clamor for what they call "revenue reform." Never before has a practical Indian policy been achieved by any Administration excepting that of President Grant. Never before have our national securities stood so high among all the nations. The recent placing of a stupendous loan upon the markets of Europe at a reduced rate of interest, is in itself a great Republican victory. The treaty with Great Britain removed all causes of difference with that great power, paved the way to increased and increasing immigration and trade, to a rival of our shipping interests, closed half a century of dispute and threatened war and opened an endless future of progress and peace. These are the facts of history; these are the works of the Republican party. They sink into and stay in all men's minds; they affect alike the popular instinct and the popular interest; they appeal to the judgment and the pockets of men; they make it impossible to organize a successful opposition; they discourage Republican faction; they overshadow the poor business of individual calumny; they uplift the people from the consideration of small charges against President Grant to a careful appreciation of his grand military and civic achievements. Even honest Democrats will turn away from an accusation which springs from disappointment and will candidly honor the record of promises ratified and reforms accomplished.—Press.

A Mysterious Trunk—What it Contained.

A few days ago a well-dressed woman arrived at the Hudson River railroad depot, in New York, having with her a large trunk, which after purchasing a ticket for Chicago, she had checked to that point.—The woman did not then take the train, and shortly afterwards a peculiar smell caused some curious employee at the station to pry open the trunk, when it was found to contain the body of a young woman about 18 or 20 years of age. There was no article of clothing on her, and nothing whereby she could be identified. Of course the discovery created a great excitement, and every exertion was made by the police, who were at once notified to trace out the mystery. An important clue was furnished by a boy named Alex. Parks, often called Paddy, well known around the depot. A woman who came to the depot with the trunk, obtained Paddy's assistance in bringing and buying her ticket and procuring a check for the trunk. Paddy observed that the trunk bore the name of Tripp. The police immediately made inquiries and found that there was but one carman named Tripp in the city, but three named Trapp, one of whom has a truck such as that described by the boy. This man was arrested but denied being at the depot that day. His conduct and manner strengthened the suspicion that not only had the truckman who drove the truck been secured, but that he knew more of the mystery than he dared to tell. He finally informed the authorities that he had obtained the trunk from a house in Second avenue, which was found to be occupied by Dr. Rozenweig. The police then arrested the doctor, and made a search of the premises, when they discovered indications which left no doubt that the woman had lost her life by an abortion which the doctor had attempted to perform. The prisoner was held to await further investigation. The deceased has been recognized as a Miss Bowley, of Patterson, N. J., and when the report reached that place, a young man named Conklin, who is supposed to have been her seducer, committed suicide. The affair has caused great excitement in that city as both the parties are well known.

On account of the large space occupied in our columns by the List of premiums and Election Proclamation we have not room for as much reading matter as we would like to have.

The Public Debt of the United States shows a further decrease in August of $9,322,298, making the total decrease since March 4, 1869, $951,461,699.

Among the most encouraging phases of the Republican party this year and they are seen on every hand, are the proceedings of the different State conventions of the organization that are being held all over the country. Everywhere these bodies are marked with most cordial good feeling, remarkable unanimity, and rare sagacity.
