Select Poetry. SUES ANDERS. Sue Sanders was a country lass, With eyes as brown as hazel, And cheeks that held the peachy bloom Of eighteen summer suns.

A WIFE'S STRATEGY. BY M. KEBRUEVAL. Frank Horton was a pleasant fellow when he had his own way. He was handsome and wealthy, perfect in the art of flirting, and a great favorite in society.

idea of fragility and softness. The snail, firmly closed mouth, drooping eyelids, the decided, contralto voice, and white, firm hands, showed plainly that she would find a way to assert and maintain her dignity. Frank's friend departed with the peculiar feeling of satisfaction we always have when we know our friends are going to meet with just retribution for sins past and future; especially when we have always felt they needed just such lessons to perfect their characters.

"And will you forgive me, Daisy, and be my darling wife again, and let me love you?" Here Frank broke down completely; he sank down in the nearest chair and covered his face with his hands. Daisy moved closer to him, and laying her hand on his head, gently stroked his hair. Frank put his arms around her, and while she wiped away his tears, he confessed all. He promised ample amends in future. In Daisy's eyes there was a look of delicious triumph plainly visible.

Frank gave a great sigh of relief, then, when he thought what a fool he had been, he began to look decidedly sheepish; a look of anguish took its place as the thought that Daisy could never love him again, came to his mind. "I await your decision, Frank," said Daisy.

the Delaware river, judging by the attention paid to the subject, the people entertain the liveliest anticipations regarding the success of the undertaking to revive the heretofore great fisheries of that stream, and well they may, for such a result will be of incalculable benefit to the population here. From the tone of the press, we judge, too, that much anxiety is felt to have the commissioners proceed as promptly as possible with their work, and as the season is already advanced, any delay now would prove a years' repast.

From Exchanges we learn many interesting incidents in connection with the recent earthquake in California. The Inyo independent office, a frame building filled with adobe, was not thrown down but the office was badly damaged even a cooking stove that stood in it being smashed to pieces.

From independence to Big Pine, a distance of forty-five miles, there is not a square yard of ground that does not show cracks. Near Big Pine they found a crevice across the road sixty feet wide and six feet deep. Off the road, but in plain sight, this crevice was two hundred feet wide and over twenty feet deep, and it could be traced a long distance running north and south, parallel with the Sierra Nevada mountains.

Letters from Lone Pine say the whole of Owen Valley has been moved southward fourteen feet. Over seven thousand shocks had occurred to date and they still continued, but not with sufficient force to do any damage. The earthquake of March 25, hurled immense rocks down the cliffs into the valley of Yosemite, smashing great pine trees to splinters, but detracting nothing from the scenery of the valley. An Indian runner brings a dispatch from the Mouth of the Colorado river, which says the earthquake caused immense waves to roll up the Gulf of California.

Anecdote of Wiggall. A Texas correspondent sends the following Mr. L. T. Wiggall, one of the leading secessionists of the South, felt after Lee's surrender somewhat embarrassed as to his corporeal safety in a land then in the possession of his enemies. He left Richmond in disguise, and traveled on mule back, alone for Texas. Dick Taylor had also surrendered, and all the ferries and crossings were in the hands of the Federals. Wiggall could pursue no other course but to risk himself to be put across the Mississippi by a detachment of Union soldiers. He was well disguised. Observing that no attention was paid to himself, and wishing to know if possible, how the wind blew, he began a general tirade against the leading Confederates, winding up by inquiring what would be done with the seamy Wiggall if they should catch him, the soldiers replied, they supposed they would hang him.

All Kinds of News. Sportsmen are no longer paid for shooting wild cats in Union county. The Arizona papers warn people to get their hair shingled. The Chicago Post calls Mr. Greeley a "free trader." The Prince and Princess of Wales intend to return to England in June. There is said to be excellent sleighing in and around Laporte, Sarisva county. The Republicans carried Davonport, Iowa, the other day, at the municipal election. Count Von Arnim, the Minister of the German Empire to France, has returned to Paris. A statue of Sir Walter Scott has been ordered from Mr. Stead, an Englishman, for the Central Park. Imposters are traveling in all directions collecting relief for the sufferers by the fires in the West last year. Lewisburg offers $500 reward for the arrest of the parties who attempted to burn "Musick hall," in that borough. Now is the time to keep a sharp lookout for broken rails, as the frost leaves the ground and ties begin to sink. It is a season for accidents on our great lines of travel. A printer's devil in an Omaha newspaper office was bitten by a dog some days ago. After lingering several days death put an end to the suffering of the dog. At the charter election in St. Paul, Minnesota, Tuesday, the Republicans elected the mayor by 1,500 majority, and a majority of the Common Councilmen. Prince Henry, son of the crown Prince of the German Empire has recently been appointed to a Berlin boat binder. His father learned the trade of a type setter, and his grandfather, the present Emperor, that of glazier. A five dollar bill of the Honorable National bank has been sent to that institution, from Chicago, for redemption. It had passed through the great fire in a safe. It was badly scorched and very brittle, but there was no difficulty in reading the larger print upon it. From London we hear a rumor obtaining currency to the effect that America's claim against Great Britain was submitted to the Geneva Tribunal of Arbitration for all damages is $211,000,000. The Globe wants Gladstone to confirm or deny its truthfulness. An intimation is also made by the Echo that Canada's contention with the mother country is merely artificial, and will find something to be the subject of a meeting.

The Fish Law—The New Commission. We doubt if any act of the last session of the Legislature has met or will meet with more approval than that providing for the revival of fisheries in the great rivers and creeks of the State. New Jersey having placed on her statute books to cooperate with Pennsylvania in this business in the Delaware river. The Legislature has made the most liberal allowances for this purpose, while the provisions of the bill for hatching houses are for improvements in the dams of the Susquehanna and other streams, the appropriation is adequate and the work has been confined to able and experienced commissioners. These facts are before the people, who fully understand and appreciate their importance. In the regions of

"I saw," she continued, "where the wild passion for excitement was leading you, and decided to make one effort to save you. I saw you give Tom the letter for Miss Clifford, told him to do something for me, saying I would post the letter myself, and afterwards I managed to be on hand to intercept your answers to the letter I had written in Miss Clifford's name to you." "And she never received them?" said Frank. "Not one," said Daisy. Frank gave a great sigh of relief, then, when he thought what a fool he had been, he began to look decidedly sheepish; a look of anguish took its place as the thought that Daisy could never love him again, came to his mind. "I await your decision, Frank," said Daisy.
