Politics in a Muddle.

Politics have become somewhat mixed—we mean, of course, Democratic politics. This party is in a terrible dilemma. The fact is, they know not what to do. For twenty years they have had no fixed or settled principles. Their main object being to steer the ship of State or hold the reins of Government. Now their only principle or battle-cry is "anything to beat Grant."

The desire of their heart is to beat Grant; but they do not want to vote for Greeley. If they do not vote for Greeley they cannot beat Grant. If they decide to vote for Greeley they bury their party and join in a movement to elect a man who belongs, in his own language, to no party, but has fought the Democratic party all his life, where, after the election, will they belong?

The poor fellows are desperate. We pity them, honestly and truly, them. They have been wrong all their lives and they know it; but it is so hard for them to make confession of this fact. They want to get into office. Out of office they cannot live. They cannot succeed if they stand where they are. It is certain and sure political death. If they join the Liberal movement, it looks about the same. In either event they see the "pale horse and his rider."

They are in about the same position as the fellow on the burning ship—if he stood where the fire was he would burn to death; if he jumped into the sea he would surely be drowned; so between the two chances he had but little choice.—If Greeley could only change his name what a blessing it would be to the Democratic party, and then he might help them out of this dilemma. They do not like Grant because he whipped General Lee, and by the aid of the "Boys in Blue" and the loyal people of the country, suppressed the slave holders' rebellion. They hate Grant. All schools and disloyal people do. They hate Greeley; but Greeley hates Grant. They support Greeley for this reason: as far Greeley and the Democracy agreed in some things before Greeley was in favor of the cotton States going out of the Union. At that time we were told (never mind before the war) that Greeley; we relied upon Tribune, indeed we almost, not to say too strong, swore by the Tribune. But our confidence in that paper, and in Horace Greeley, was shaken when, in the Tribune, which we have carefully filed, dated Nov. 9, 1860, he wrote the following:

"If the cotton States shall become satisfied that they can do better out of the Union than in it, we insist in no manner on their going in peace. The right to secede may be revolutionary, but it exists nevertheless. * * *

"We must ever resist the right of any State to remain in the Union and nullify and defy the laws thereof. To withdraw from the Union is quite another matter, and whenever a considerable section of our Union shall deliberately resolve to go out, we shall resist all coercive measures to keep them in it. We hope never to live in a Republic where one section is pinned to another by the bayonets."

This was when we let go our hold on Horace Greeley. The language suited Jeff Davis and his rebel Democrats of the South. And we suppose it was this kindred feeling which caused Greeley, after the war, to travel hundreds of miles to become, unasked and unsolicited the bondsman of Jefferson Davis. Again, the Tribune of November 26th, 1859, and we quote it verbatim et literatim, Mr. Greeley said:

"If the cotton States unitedly and earnestly wish to withdraw peacefully from the Union, we think they should be allowed to do so. Any attempt to compel them by force to remain, would be contrary to the fundamental ideas on which human liberty is based."

Was it not such vagaries and false logic as this which drove the Southern rebels to believe that they could peaceably secede from the Union? Was not Horace Greely inconsistent in these utterances with his life long opposition to slavery? And do they not go to prove that if there had been no more reliable men than Mr. Greeley and the leaders of the Democratic party in the country, we would to-day have no Union, no United States Government; but instead, a Union split in twain, dissolved, dismembered—two distinct Governments and interminable war? It is these vagaries of Mr. Greeley which recommended him to the Cincinnati Convention, believing that the Democrats, especially those of the South, would support him.

Nevertheless they are in a dilemma—They like him for what he said about peaceable secession; but he was in favor of equality, of universal suffrage, of almost every Radical that has afflicted and belittled the party, and they have no pledge on his part that he has given up one playful eccentricities or is sorry for the abuse he has indulged in at their expense. Yet they must beat Grant. This is now their only principle. Horace must do the same thing to be elected President of the United States. How strangely that word United States must sound to the Democrats and Horace. With them as leaders it would have to be written Divided States. Here they agree. If they could only forget the past, they could forgive the old philosopher for the hard names he has called them, and swallow him in a moment.

But you're dyed in the wool. Jefferson Davis Democrats like P. G. Meek, cannot forget, it does not agree with their nature. They are willing to forgive with the mental reservation, that the old grudge should hold good if they ever get on their legs again; but to forget, is to blot out, and their keen sense of past wrongs at the hand of Mr. Greeley, has made this blotting business a hard task for them. It is a fearful dilemma, and if we could suggest any practical way to escape it, we would, out of pure benevolence, give our Democratic friends the benefit of it. But we cannot afford any relief.

The Democracy is dead any way, and the Greeley movement is sure to die next November, no matter what may be the action of the Baltimore Convention. It now seems to us simply a question as to whether our Liberal friends and the Democrats want a double burial. If they want it, let them shut their eyes and jump; if they desire to live and grow, and be contented and happy the remainder of their days, let them drop the dry bones of Democracy, repudiate this sickly movement nursed by a few soreheads, and join the only substantial party now before the people—the party of true reform, of honesty, of loyalty, of intelligence; the party that has been doubly tried in peace and in war. In a word, let them attach themselves to the Republican party. It is never too late to do good.—Bellefonte Republican.

Opinions of the Press on the Nomination.

Grant and Wilson—These are the names inscribed on the proud Republican banner, in response to the demands of the popular will.—Utica Herald.

The renomination of Gen. Grant by the Philadelphia convention was simply the technical enrollment of the will of the people.—Providence Journal.

The anticipations and the desire of the people have been promptly met by the Republican National convention at Philadelphia.—Ebaira Advertiser.

Fortunately Wilson's name has but two syllables, and the old campaign songs may be used again, changing Grant and Colfax to Grant and Wilson.—Germantown Chronicle.

It is almost superfluous in us, through the columns of the Journal to say that President Grant has been renominated to the high office he now so worthily fills.—Jersey City Journal.

The enthusiasm for Grant at Philadelphia, and the general good feeling animating the Philadelphia convention, ruffles the temper of the otherwise sweet and amiable Tribune.—Poughkeepsie News.

The Republican National convention has done its work wisely and well. Its every utterance is but the echoing of the heart and the will of the nation; its purpose and the purpose of the people are one.—Rochester Democrat.

The convention which yesterday placed in nomination Ulysses S. Grant for President and Henry S. Wilson for Vice President was one of the largest, best organized and most harmonious that has ever been held in this country.—Evening Telegraph, Phila.

General Grant, the hero, the publicist, the honest man has been unanimously and vociferously indorsed by the party that saved the country under his leadership.—All-Day City Item, Phila.

As State after State declared for General Grant, the enthusiasm of the vast audience momentarily increased, and when he was announced as the unanimous choice of the convention, the excitement was indescribable.—Hartford Courant.

It is eminently proper that Grant be nominated. He has done the country services second to none. He subdued a great rebellion, brought peace and prosperity to the country.—Knickerbocker, Albany.

In renominating General Grant for president by acclamation the Republican National convention has but obeyed the behests and met the desires of a large majority of the American people.—State Gazette, Trenton, N. J.

The great work of this body of Republican delegates from all the States and territories is completed, and Ulysses Grant and Henry Wilson are the choice as candidates for the two highest offices in the gift of the nation.—Missouri Republican.

In renominating for the office of President of the United States the illustrious soldier and prudent statesman, Ulysses S. Grant, the Philadelphia convention has given evidence of its wisdom, its patriotism, its difference to the emphatically pronounced wish of the people.—Lockport Journal, N. Y.

THE RUSSELL MOWER & REAPER.

Manufactured by

C. Russell & Co. CANTON, O.

Weight and Strength,

There must be a certain amount of weight, for the reason that all the power that can be brought to bear upon the knife is derived from the gravity or weight of the machine upon the ground. That it must combine streng th enough to do well the work for which it is intended.

Durability and Utility,

It is important that a machine should be durable, for no matter how excellent it may be in all its parts, if not durable it will prove useless. Utility is the great object in our combined Reaper and Mower to be useful is the desired aim.

The mower cuts a four foot swarth and the Reaper a swarth of six feet.

Rear Cut vs Front Cut

For the finest cut it has been claimed that it was the more easily handled; that it was safer for driver and machine; that there is not the same liability to injury, by falling or being thrown off, the driver would fall behind the cutters. The Rear Cut machine is more easily handled, because the horses are hitched nearer to the main axle, than in the Front Cut. No weight or sawing on the necks of the horses. The driver can see obstructions, thus saving himself and machine from injury.

Draft and Flexibility,

It is meritously claimed for the Russell to have as little side draft as any machine in use; and its flexibility adopts it to the inequalities of the ground over which it may be drawn.
