Poetry. Repentant.

BY JOSEPHINE POLLAND. Mother, I kneel on the door stone, Penitect, weary and worn;
Penitect, weary and worn;
Many a mile have I wondered,
And fasted since yesterday morn;
Darkness is gathering round me,
Never again shall I roam;
Open the door to me, mother,
Welcome your prodigat home?

Father was angry—so angry—
And stern when he knew my disgrace
He thrust me away from his presence,
And shut the door in my face.
But mother, your love did not leave me,
I saw the tears ready to start.
And knew that, though guilty & banished
I still had a place in your heart.

They say you grow feebler and feebler, By reason of sorrow and shame; That your bair is as white as a snow

And it's seldom you mention my mame.
But, oh, I will not believe them,
When slanders like this they repeat.
For the voice of my morber has called me,
And brought me again to her feet.

She talked to the Savior about me, and preyed—as a mother can pray ! And back to the fold He has brought me The lamb who went wand'ring astray I soon became weary of exile;
I soon became weary of sin;
And louged for a life that was .pure—
But who would have taken me in?

O mother, dear, say you forgive me, And take me again to your breast; Not let me die on the door stone, Alone, unforgiven, unblest! Come quickly -a footstep approaches !
Nor yours -but another's -good bye!
Tell father that God has not left me
Outside of His threshhold to die!
