

HANGING OF WADE.

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa., Nov. 6.—Nelson E. Wade was hung here today for the murder of the McBrides.

A $100 counterfeit greenback was discovered at the sub-treasury in New York, composed of a genuine face and a counterfeit back. It is supposed that a good bill was ingeniously split in two, when one-half was attached to a counterfeit back, and the other to a counterfeit face.

PARMERS made from the Treasury Department by warrants during the month of October last were as follows: Civil and miscellaneous, $7,003,332 89; War, $4,582,230 49; Navy, $2,256,114; Interior, Pensions and Indians, $381,185 27. Total, $14,832,865 37. The above does not include payments on account of interest or principal of public debt of United States.

A DEMOCRAT'S IDEA.—The Louisville (Ky.) Commercial recalls to mind a remark that the late Humphrey Marshall made in a half-jesting way one day, to the effect that he thought it wasn't worth while for the Democrats to get into power yet awhile. He wanted the Republicans to go ahead, pay the national debt, get the treasury full, and then step out of the way and let the Democrats have full sweep. "The fact is," he said, "we Democrats haven't had a chance at the public crib for years, and we are powerful hungry. I don't want anything done to injure the credit of the Government, and I don't want to be bothered with economy and the trouble of paying debts, and so I think it would be better to wait till we won't be bothered with considerations of that kind, and can take our swing at the Treasury with unembarrassed minds."

Great Fire in Harrisburg

State Printing Office in Ruins!

LOSS ESTIMATED AT $600,000!

About eleven o'clock this forenoon the fire alarm bells of this city sent forth a startling peal, informing the citizens that a conflagration was in progress. An investigation developed the fact that the State printing office and bakery, situated on Third street and Blackberry alley, was in flames. The firemen responded quickly, and their apparatus was soon at the scene of destruction. The men made desperate efforts to stay the flames, but without avail.

It soon became evident that nothing would save the building. Huge volumes of smoke poured from the windows of the structure, from which emerged the employees of the establishment. There are about one hundred and fifty persons employed in it, and as there was but one stairway, and that close by the elevator, through which the flames and smoke rushed from floor to floor, a number of the workmen and woman were compelled to seek egress through the windows.

A number of girls belonging to the bindery left the iron window frames on the second floor, through which they escaped to the cornice on the Third street front, and were taken from thence to the ground by means of ladders, although one or two jumped (one from the second and one from the third story) to the ground and escaped with slight bruises. Several of the male employees received bruises and scratches in the rush for safety. All the persons in the establishment at the time escaped, which may be considered a miracle under the circumstances.

In the meantime the flames spread to the adjoining buildings on Third street and Blackberry alley. Swartz's livery stable, the Lechiel hotel and the row of brick residences on the opposite side of Third street were all in danger. Every effort was made to save the Lechiel, which was last accomplished.

Great alarm was caused among the residents of the neighborhood, who began to move household goods and valuables to a place of safety. All efforts of the firemen were directed to saving such property as they could approach, the intense heat from the printing office driving all from its vicinity.

Suddenly the cry went from mouth to mouth, "The walls will fall!" when a rush from danger was made by those in the vicinity. The alarm was well founded, for the printing office had suddenly been transformed into a roaring furnace, rivaling in the fierceness of its flames the fiery furnace of Holy Writ. Here and there the flames appeared through the cracked walls, and the building presented a grand appearance, with smoke and flame issuing from every window and sparks filling the still air. Without warning the walls slowly leaned away from the centre, and gathering momentum as they fell, crashed to the ground in a confused mass of bricks and cinders. The street was filled with bricks, and strange to say, no one was seriously injured.

The fire originated in the paper shaving pile in the cellar, near the elevator. It is supposed to have been caused by spontaneous combustion, as there was no fire used near the place where it started.

The following is a list of buildings destroyed: State Printing office, Swartz's livery stable, Lentz's grocery dwelling occupied by Geo. Swartz, building occupied by John A. Stahl and McCormick's stable, adjoining Mr. Bergner's stable.

The double eagles coined during the month, if stretched out in a line, would extend a distance of nearly twelve miles. The largest delivery of coin ever made in one day occurred during the month on an occasion when the Chief Coiner delivered to the Superintendent $1,290,000 in double eagles.

Wade replied, firmly looking upon the crowd below: "GENTLEMEN: I am guilty of the murder of Isabella and John McBride, it has been told you how I committed the deed. The Commonwealth did not seem satisfied. There were witnesses who swore they saw me at the stables. It was false. I slept on an humble step that night, and I hope God will forgive them for swearing false."

I hope the day of resurrection is at hand for I feel in my heart that I am going to a home which lawyers and policemen cannot deprive me of. He then spoke of the glorious flag of the Union, and of the enthusiasm he felt that neither gold nor silver could buy it. "Remember," he said, "I stand on the death trap, and I ask of you again to fight for the Union."

Then continuing, "My God, bless you all; forgive the Sheriff and all others; remember that Jesus died for us all. You thought I would have to be carried to the platform, but I committed the deed, and know I must answer for it. Remember that Governor Geary ate his breakfast, and left this world suddenly—so be prepared."

While Rev. Dr. Reilly addressed the audience, Wade took a seat, apparently unconcerned, while a death-like silence reigned. He would look at the crowds upon the roofs, and then scowl upon those in the jail yard.

The black cap was drawn over his face, and he uttered a prayer, deep and solemn. Revs. Reilly and Curran responded. Suddenly a "thug" was heard, and the criminal fell with cramped limbs. The knot had slipped, and a shudder ran through those assembled, as Wade was heard to exclaim, "Oh Lord, have mercy." The officers sprang forward, the form of the criminal was grasped, and while the audience stood almost breathless, he was borne again to the platform. The noose placed about his neck, and again the "thug" was heard that hurled the soul of Nelson E. Wade into another world.

Upon the second fall there was scarcely a convulsion; he died easy, and went to eternity to answer for the enormity of his crime.

The executioner's rope was cut in small pieces and distributed as relics to the spectators.

After the execution the corpse was placed in a coffin and all the curious outside world were admitted to the prison to view it.

On Tuesday night Wade was again desperate, attempting to tear out the water pipe. He threw a cup of tea in the face of the turnkey. But all his movements were watched close.

Nothing will better show the hard end character of the criminal than the following: On Wednesday he inquired of one of the officers at what hour he would be executed, and was answered, "perhaps shortly after ten o'clock." Wade replied, "That will suit me exactly, for I have an engagement to take dinner in hell at twelve o'clock, and I don't want to disappoint them."

The Lancaster Express says: "The enforcement of the law compelling all druggists to take out a retail liquor dealer's license for the sale of alcohol has created quite a breeze among the druggists. The law is compulsory, and whether they sell alcohol or not they must take out the license at a cost of $25 per annum, and display the same in a prominent place in the stores, just as liquor sellers are compelled to do in their bar rooms. We saw one druggist who declared that he did not sell $5 worth of alcohol in a year, and he was trying to figure out the profits of the business—$25 for the privilege of selling $5 worth of alcohol. When we left him he had not yet arrived at a solution of the difficulty. The little breeze that has sprung up threatens to grow into a hurricane all over the country."

During the month of October the gold deposits at the Philadelphia Mint amounted to $10,099,558 11, the silver deposits and purchases to $228,539 78, making a total of $10,328,098 89.

The following is a recapitulation of the coinage executed during the month:

Table with 3 columns: Pieces, Value. Rows include Gold Coinage, Gold Bars, Silver Coinage, Silver Bars, Base Coinage, and Total.

MASS. Boston, Mass., Nov. 6.—The towns in the State are now from the total shows that Washburne, Republican, for Governor, has 72,025; Gaston, Democrat, 59,467. The Democrats have made very large gains, even for an off year, and hence are jubilant.

NEW YORK. NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Full returns of this city on the State ticket give Willers, Democrat, for Secretary of State, 66,988; Thayer, Republican, 35,007. The Democratic State ticket is elected by an average majority of about 10,000.

MARYLAND. BALTIMORE, Nov. 5.—From the latest returns it is estimated that the Legislature will stand as follows: Senate—Democrats, 23; Republicans, 3. House—Democrats, 68; Republicans, 15. Democratic majority on joint ballot, 73.

NEW JERSEY. NEWARK, Nov. 5.—Both the Senate and House of Representatives of New Jersey will be Republican—the former by a majority of seven, and the latter by four of five. This insures the election of a Republican U. S. Senator.

ILLINOIS. CHICAGO, Nov. 5.—Election returns from twenty-seven counties in this State show that the Farmers' ticket was elected in fifteen, the Republicans in ten and the Democrats in two. Commins' majority for mayor in this city is 11,000.

KANSAS. LEAVENWORTH, Nov. 5.—The Republican and Farmers' tickets are generally successful throughout this State.

MICHIGAN. DETROIT, Nov. 5.—Comstock, Democrat, for Congress in the Fifth District, is elected by about 200 majority.

WISCONSIN. MILWAUKEE, Nov. 5.—The returns to-night do not change the estimates sent last night. The Senate is nearly tied, with three districts to hear from. The Reformers have a large majority in the Assembly.

MINNESOTA. MILWAUKEE, Nov. 5.—The latest returns from Minnesota give Davis, Republican, 5,000 to 8,000 majority. Dike, farmers' candidate for State Treasurer, is probably elected by a small majority.

MISSISSIPPI. Vicksburg, Nov. 5.—The election returns are incomplete. This city gives Alcorn 100 majority. The regular Republican county ticket is elected except two representatives. Nothing official is known, but it is generally believed that Ames has carried the State by 15,000.

VIRGINIA. RICHMOND, Nov. 5.—Full county returns come in slowly. Aggregate Conservative gains so far, 4,445; losses, 1,132.
