THE POST.

MIDDLEBURG, SEPT. 17, 1874.

Local News, &c.

—Do not throw paper on the streets, as horses frequently take fright at it.

—A force of men are busy on the Fair grounds, leveling the course, putting up buildings &c., &c.

—The "Excelsior Woolen Factory," owned by Seebold & Brother, at Kantz, this county, was entirely consumed by fire, with all the stock and machinery, on Friday evening. It was insured.

TO WELL DIGGERS.—Proposals will be received, and a contract entered into for the digging and walling up of a well on the Fair grounds of the Snyder Co. Agricultural Society, at the office of T. J. Smith, on Saturday, Sept. 19, 1874, at 2 o'clock P. M. For further information attend the meeting of the Executive Committe at the time above stated.

—On Sunday afternoon, a week, as a son and daughter of Daniel Stauffer of Selinsgrove, were retiring home from a visit to Middleburg, they were attacked by a negro who was in his bare feet, he drew a large knife and threatened the lives of the parties, at the same time seizing the horse, but Mr. Stauffer urged on his horse and succeeded in disengaging him and made good his escape.

ARM AMPUTATED.—John T. Huffnagle, one of our County Commissioners, had one of his arms amputated a few days ago. Most of our readers will recollect that Mr. Huffnagle fell about a year ago and broke it, since which time it has given him a great deal of pain. The operation was successfully performed by Dr. B. F. Wagenseller, assisted by Dr. Priestly, both of Selinsgrove. Mr. Huffnagle is, his numerous friends will be glad to hear, getting along finely.

—We are informed that on the evening of the 8th inst., as Samuel Millhouse of New Berlin, was on his way home from the Post Office, and when near an ally leading to the Foundry Building, he was seized by two unknown persons who placed a bag over his head and dragged him to the rear of the foundry. He became insensible from the rough treatment and on consciousness returning, went to his home which he did not reach until 2 o'clock in the morning. He remembers hearing one of the ruffians say, "d——n it, letter let him go, he has no money any how." Fortunately Mr. Millhouse had nothing of value about his person.

Suitable committees are appointed to make all necessary arrangements, to carry out the programme of these festivities. Come one! Come all!!

WM. NOETLING, Co. Supt.

Selinsgrove, Aug. 20, 1874.

Report of Superintendent of Snyder County for 1873--4.

Houses.—A number of our houses are good substantial structures, either of wood or brick, "pleasantly located, amply large, and well lighted." Some are provided with "convenient places for baskets and clothing, with cases for books and apparatus, and with not less than one hundred square feet of blackboard surface." Very few however, if any, have "the ceiling not less than twelve feet high," and only eight are furnished with seats adapted to the size of the pupils."

In my statistical report I have given eighty-eight houses as having injurious furniture. In all of them the seats, besides being objectionable in other respects, are to high for the smaller pupils. Compelling children to sit upon such seats six hours a day is nothing short of direct cruelty. Most of the restlessness, which is so annoying to the teachers is caused by the uncomfortableness of the seats.

Every branch of study taught in our schools requires the use of the blackboard. No teacher can do justice to himself or his pupils without it. Hence every house should have a sufficient slated surface "to permit all the members of the largest class to use it at the same time."

It is much to be regretted that this matter has thus far not received the attention which its importance demands. Many of the so called black-boards found in the school houses of our county are such only in name. Most of them are not only too small, but have the paint so much worn off, and the surface so smooth and glossy, as to render them unfit for use.

The perfection to which liquid slating has been brought, and the cheapness of lumber and workmanship, make it inexcusable on the part of school authorities to have either insufficient or poor black-boards.

Schools.—The whole number of schools is now one hundred and eight.

In my last year's report I made a mistake in the number of graded schools. I should have reported eleven instead of eighteen. There are now thirteen, those of Beavertown having since been graded. During the present year, two more, those of Centreville, will be added, the directors of that district having determined to erect a house of sufficient capacity for two schools.

Our graded schools are doing good work. Those of Beavertown have at least doubled in efficiency since they have been graded.

Selinsgrove has seven graded schools. Before being graded they were so poor as scarcely to deserve being called schools; now they are among the best in the county, and are becoming better every year. Much praise is due the directors for their continued efforts to improve them.

The superiority of graded over ungraded schools is so obvious that directors should not hesitate to grade wherever it can be done. Freeburg should delay the matter no longer. It should have at least three grades; two of them in the house in town, and the third, the highest, in the academy.

The schools of Adamsburg should also be graded. The two houses are sufficiently near together to remove all objections to doing so.

The organization and classification of our schools was better during the past year than heretofore.

In a number of our rural districts, the reading books above the third, in the second series in use, have been discarded, the classes that had used them were put into the third, and the reading thereby much improved.

Few things have done more to make the work of our schools superficial than the rapid advancement of the pupils through their text-books. For this unfortunate state of things both directors and teachers are responsible. The former erroneously measured the progress of their children by the number of pages of books gone over in a given time; and the latter, not to fall short of the expectations of the former, pushed their pupils ahead as fast as they could.

The mistaken notion still prevails in some parts of our county, and retards the improvement of the schools. It is however disappearing, and it is hoped will soon be numbered with the errors of the past.

In most of our rural districts the German language is a drawback to the advancement of the pupils. Many of them understand very little English, some none at all; and hence to meet with success in their work, the teachers must be able to speak both languages. The idea prevails that German children will learn English more rapidly from a teacher who can speak only the latter language, than from one who can speak both; but that this is a mistake is too evident to require proof.

Examinations.—My last year's examinations showed considerable improvement in the qualification of the teachers over those of the previous year; yet to provide all the schools with teachers, certificates had to be given to at least thirty who should have been rejected.

The time may come when all who are not thoroughly competent can be rejected; but it has not yet arrived. Such a policy, if carried out, not only in the county but throughout the State, would keep a majority of the schools, closed, and deprive the children belonging to them of all opportunity for acquiring an education.

Teaching.—Among many of our people, among the majority I believe, our public schools do not bear a high reputation. They are regarded as costing more than they are worth. The consequence is that comparatively little interest is taken in them except to find fault with them. It might be supposed that the cause of this is to be found in the fact that among many people dollars and cents count for more than education, but such a supposition would be doing our county injustice. It must be looked for elsewhere. It lies in the arbitrary and irrational method of teaching that has so long prevailed. Both teachers and pupils have performed the part of machines. The school rooms have been converted into mere recitation rooms; and worse than all, the children's original desire to learn has been destroyed. Hence very few attend school from a desire to learn, and after arriving at the age of fourteen or fifteen years, most of them prefer to spend their time elsewhere than at school.

The majority of those who have completed their education in the public schools have only the most rudimentary and superficial knowledge of the studies gone over. Spelling, reading, writing, and arithmetic are the only branches that received attention. Grammar and geography were considered useless or too dry and abstruse for the comprehension of ordinary minds. In short, the condition of the schools has been such as to dishearten the most ardent friend of popular education. Last year however a change commenced. About one half of our teachers abandoned the old torturing method of teaching, and with the most gratifying success, introduced new and better ones. During my second visitation, those teachers who had most thoroughly changed their mode of instruction, expressed themselves as well pleased with the new methods as to be unwilling under any circumstances to return to the old ones.

The spirit of improvement has not yet however reached all parts of the county. Some sections are still as far back as ever. They continue to employ poor teachers, and the result is that they have nothing but poor schools. Wherever this is the case, complaint upon complaint is heard. Every one who has anything to do with the management of the schools receives blame. Even the Superintendent, however faithful he may be in the discharge of his duties, is not permitted to go without it. But this condition of things has, is confidently believed, about had its day. The past year's progress, and the desire which most of our teachers manifest to improve themselves and to do better work, lead me to look for a general improvement of the schools throughout the county during the present year.

Directors.—The labors of the Superintendent cannot prove as successful without the cooperation of the directors as with it. This is too evident to require extended remarks. Whatever duties they neglect, they should not fail to accompany him in his visits to the schools. For at no other time can they so well become acquainted with the condition and wants of the latter as then.

Another duty of equal importance is attending the examination of the teachers. They can much better judge of a teacher's fitness for his work if they hear him examined than they can without it.

Though many of our directors have proved themselves faithful officers, yet I believe if directors generally were paid for the time actually spent in official duties, they would take more interest in the schools than they otherwise do. They could then pay to have their own work done while they would be doing that of the public.

County Institute.—The County Institute was a success both in the attendance of teachers and others as well as in its results. Nearly all our teachers were present the first week of those. To be properly benefitted they should be in attendance the entire session. Those who attend only a day or two, generally go away very little wiser than when they came, and, what is worse, put the blame upon the institute.

CONCLUSION.—Besides the work given in my statistical report during the one hundred and seventy five days which I spent in official duties, I held ten district institutes, wrote one hundred and eighty-six letters, and traveled one thousand six hundred and forty miles.

An examination of the amount of work done by me, will, I think, show I very candidly stated that I was not rich, but versus the public was wealthy.

As stated elsewhere, the schools in some parts of the county have improved, in others they have not. While they have all improved more or less, I will not attempt to say. It will be more profitable for the good Democrats to answer the question, than it would be for me to do so. The fault is not to be ascribed to those to whom it properly belongs, and not to me.

I have endeavored to discharge my duties faithfully. That I have not done them to the entire satisfaction of all concerned, I do not believe. I did not expect to be able to do so. My aim has been to do the best possible for the intellectual training of the children of the county, and to what extent I have succeeded, time alone will tell.
