

Advice to a Bride.

In looking over some old papers, I have come across a copy of a letter written long, long ago, and embracing "my opinion" at that time as well as now.

"August, 1870 - My Dear Niece: Your favor containing your kind invitation to be a guest to witness your nuptials arrived in due time, and it is with anything but feelings of indifference that I decline the invitation, as I am obliged to do from unavoidable causes.

"I would you retain the love of your husband, (which I trust is now mutual, prove to him, not merely in word, that the treasure he bestows (the wealth of the affections) is fully reciprocated - not by striving to appear gay in the heartless, giddy world, at the expense of his peace, if not his heart, but when you see him toiling in his daily avocations to some competence to make himself and family comfortable in future years, show your readiness to forward his plans by adopting a system of economy and self-denial.
