THE POST.

Middleburg...NOVEMBER 12, 1874

A Love Story of the Rebellion.

We were sitting in our room at the Glades Hotel, in Oakland, Md., one day, with a charming lady who had dropped in on a visit. One of our windows looked into that of another room, so placed by the projection of the main building that half of its interior could be seen. We were looking at and admiring a little chubby, blue-eyed, two-year old, white as snow, who was pulling a bouquet to pieces and tossing the fragments or clapping her little hands with delight as a train went thundering by.

"Those rooms," said our fair visitor, "have some tender associations for us."

"Why so?" we asked.

"Well," she answered, "during the war the greater part of the hotel was seized by the government as a hospital, and we were crowded into a few rooms. My sister and I had this. In that room where that little beauty is were two Union officers, one sick of the fever and the other of a wound. It was hard to tell whether they were slowly dying or slowly getting well. I never saw such ghastly skeletons to be alive. We were 'secesh,' and not modest about it either, but still our hearts ached for the young men, so ill, perhaps dying, far from friends and relatives.

"It bothers one to know how this should be a hospital," we said, "it is so far removed from active operations."

"It was thought," she answered, "that the mountain air of the glades would be more favorable to recovery than elsewhere, so this was made a hospital. One day one of these officers dragged himself to the window, and under the impulse of the moment my sister asked if we could do anything for them, and he answered, gasping for breath, that a little chicken soup would save their lives—Chickens were rare in those days—an army is hard on poultry. The men will work all night, after marching during the day, to secure a few chickens; so that while the hospital nurses and physicians had an unlimited supply of actual luxuries in the way of wines, potted meats and vegetables, they were without anything fresh. We knew where a few chickens were hid in a cellar, by a neighbor, and we coaxed one out of the owner, and after a deal of vexatious trouble—for at every turn we were met by a fixed bayonet and an insult—we got the soup ready, and as the guard in the hall would not permit us to approach our patients, my sister attempted to hand the bowl to the officer in the window. Just as he was feebly reaching for it, and she stretching herself half out to give it to him, a harsh, ugly voice, below cried aloud, 'Look out there—poison.' She nearly dropped herself, soup and all. Drawing back, she hesitated a second, and then she took the spoon and began eating the broth. 'Oh! bother,' cried the officer, 'don't waste it that way—I'm not afraid;' and so she gave him the soup. It seemed to revive them, and they continued steadily to improve as day after day we supplied them with chicken broth until the cellar was empty. During this time we sat at the windows talking, and we sang to them—sang 'My Maryland' and all the Southern songs we knew, until they were well enough to leave the hospital and return to duty. They both seemed sorry to go, and forced on us a quantity of hospital stores and some coffee, which last we needed sadly. Then one gave a ring and the other a brooch as tokens of their kind feelings."

"And did they never return?" we asked.

"One did not, for, poor fellow, he was killed in the very next battle in which he was engaged. His companion wrote us about it, and the writer insisted upon opening a correspondence with my sister; and soon the letters grew into love letters, and after a time they were engaged. Nearly a year subsequent to this our patient got leave of absence, and came on to be married. He put up at a hotel, and will you believe it, our own brother, who was in the Confederate service and knew nothing of my sister's affair, led a band of guerrillas at night into town and captured his intended brother-in-law from his bed. This not only deferred the marriage, but deprived the young West Pointer of his promotion, that had been promised for gallant service in the field. It was aggravating for exchanges had almost ceased, and it looked as if the lovers would have to wait until this cruel war was over before they could be united."

"You should have appealed to brahan Lincoln to give a married brigadier for an unmarried lieutenant."

"We did better. Procuring passes, we went through the lines and appealed to Jeff Davis. Jeff said he would put my brother's prisoner in his sister's keeping. They have been happily married these many years. He is a brevete brigadier general now, and it all came of our nursing the enemy in that room."

☞ An inquiring man thrust his fingers into a horse's mouth, to see how many teeth he had. The horse closed his mouth to see how many fingers the man had. The curiosity of each was fully satisfied.

☞ An old lady with a large family, living near a river, was asked if she didn't live in constant dread that some of her children would be drowned. 'Oh, no,' she replied, 'we have only lost three or four in that way.'

☞ An old bachelor says it is melancholy to reflect how many men are destined to go through life, without knowing what it is to have a shirt fit around the neck.

Celebrated Blood Cleanser or Panacea.

The Panacea will not only cure old standing and malignant complaints, but is one of the best preventatives of such disorders ever offered to the world. You can avoid severe attacks of acute diseases, such as Cholera, Small Pox, Typhoid, Bilious, Spotted and Intermittent Fevers, by keeping your blood purified. The different degrees of all such diseases depend altogether upon the condition of the blood; for if this vital fluid is deranged you will take a disease much more readily than otherwise, and the suffering will be in proportion to the amount of foreign matter in the blood. This is so reasonable that we need not here make any illustrations.

Remember the name and don't be put off with anything else which druggists may say is just as good as the BLOOD CLEANSER. Because they make more profits on cheaper articles.
