

THE POST.

Middleburg, April 15, 1875.

Because the Boy.—George Washington Fenton drove the oxen at Armstrong's mill. He was a hulk, callow-looking individual, and maintained the dignity of the labor, by as little familiarity as possible. He had, however, an extensive family, and as they would eat, he had to shift somehow, to feed them. When the lacteal fluid was surreptitiously abstracted from the neighbor's kite, or when a farmer went to harvest his sweet potatoes, he found them minus the tubers. The Fentons were making cottage cheese or feeding on roasted Cornelia.

One bright cold day Mr. Walker slaughtered a fat pig and hung it up in the smokehouse. Next morning it was gone.

Walker and his son John found Fenton at home, and, in his wife's absence, took the cradle and singing, "Hush-a-baby!" The object of the visit being made known, Fenton, with a homely air of words, professed his innocence, and told them to search the house.

"I would accompany you," she added in a hushed voice, fearing to disturb the baby. "But if this little one moans he will howl like a tramp."

Walker would not search the house without his presence.

"John can rock the cradle until we return," said Walker.

He seated himself at the cradle and搜尋 diligenty. After hours of fruitless search, Walker returned and found John still rocking the cradle and the baby still sleeping.

Fenton thanked the latter profusely for his services as nurse, and the two men departed.

Walker executed a war-dance, by the way of expelling. He had stolen the pig and expected the old man substitute for the baby, according to my story. John had quietly evaded the object of their search while his father was seeking for it. Consequently the Fentons had roast pigs and applesauce for dinner.

It is said that a young gentleman about eight years off recently sent the caribou and young boy, a few years younger, and the following message to his parents: "Miss—, I am—, and regret that previous engagements other than those seeking her favor, have caused me to say nothing about her, but I am now engaged at seven o'clock to her mother."
