Good Place to Stop At.—The Allegany House, Nos. 812 & 814 is one of the best places to stop at in Philad. The Prop. Mr. Beck, is the right man and knows how to run a first-class hotel, as all will testify who have stopped at his House. Terms reasonable.

Don't Carry Them.—Persons who have been in the habit of carrying pistols, razors, dirk knives, slung shots, and all other descriptions of concealed or dangerous weapons, will do well to leave them at home in the future. The new law enforces a heavy fine and imprisonment on any one known to have them about his or her person; and any person can inform on such a person or known to carry them, and receive one-half of the fine.

Scarlet Fever.—As the scarlet fever is prevalent in some sections of the State we insert the remedy as follows, which is so reasonable and consistent, no doubt many of them will avail themselves of it.

A Buffalo Physician. late of London, England, offers the following method of treating scarlet fever, which he asserts "is reliable," and if faithfully carried out, will prevent death in four-fifths of the cases that might otherwise prove fatal. Scarlet fever should be treated by administering to adults one tablespoonful of honey, mixed in three or four table-spoonfuls of water, sweetened three times daily; and if the throat is much swollen, gargle with yeast, and as often as necessary, insist they should apply yeast mixed with corn meal poultice. Continue to give catnip tea freely for several days to keep the eruption out of the skin.

Since the bridge has been swept away between this place and Northumberland lately, a bridge across the river at this place, the Snyder county side is freely talked of. We hope that such steps will be taken at once to complete the enterprise. There is nothing we know of at present that would yield as good a percentage on money invested as in a bridge as is suggested. The directors of the Northumberland branch of the river, and every member of the board, will be glad to see the bridge across the river which yielded 12 per cent. If that is the case, the bridge across the river will yield at least 20 per cent. on the money invested. Besides, the people generally on both sides of the river, will be greatly benefited by it. Both the producers and consumers of farm products, raised in that rich agricultural district of Snyder and Union counties, will be benefited, as it will make Snyder the head of the market which can not be easily reached, and the best of prices obtained for their produce. The people on this side of the river would be benefited by having those products brought to their doors. We are informed that the directors of the Northumberland bridge do not intend rebuilding and propose to establish a ferry. If such is the case, any one will readily see the necessity of a bridge, and we hope it will be built at once.—Snyder American.

PERSONAL APPEARANCE.—On personal appearance and habits much of our success in life depends. There have been many instances where the soul has been in a wretched condition, and the body has conquered the adverse circumstances. This is far easier to do than to overcome an offensive or disagreeable trick of behavior—for society will accord its pity and sympathy to natural defects, but for acquired ones it only recalls its disgust. Every reader will desire to mind some person toward whom he or she has felt a repugnance almost unendurable, more or less from an offensive habit such as one has formed—sometimes a mere turn of the lip, a cast of the eye, or a peculiar inflection of the voice. Often practice has been formed of clearing the throat, or spitting profusely about, or picking the ears or some other vulgar habit. These things will create a distaste for such persons, and it is better to remove them as we may, or call it, "squeamish" or "silly," we are all more or less fastidious. It is the duty of every person to make himself agreeable to others. Most of these peculiarities of manner which create aversion are spontaneous in their origin, but become so habitual that we are unconscious of them. Many of them are formed in childhood—habit not being removed after years. While we cannot help ourselves, or be loved by every body in return, still we can take special care that we do not make ourselves personally offensive by habits and ways that may shock the delicate fastidiousness of those around us.

HOME TRAINING.—If the family influence were brought to bear upon both sexes to a greater extent there would be less complaint about rowdiness in the country. This is admitted on all hands. Unless boys and girls are placed under proper restraint by their parents, and receive those moral lessons which can be taught alone in the family, they will naturally grow up idle and vicious. Their time should be occupied that they should have but little of it to spare on the streets, and above all things they should be kept in the house at night. The following remarks of an eastern newspaper contemporary are directly to the point. They relate more particularly to the training of girls, but by a parity of reasoning their spirit is equally applicable to the boys. It says: The best school for cookery and for anything else that is good is home. The most valuable practical lessons of a mother must be learned there, and the teaching of them never can be so safely delegated to others as to the parents. Whether it be the domestic virtues or the domestic comforts, the best training for them is under the paternal roof. When parents teach their children to be self-denying they have helped them far on the road to moral excellence and happiness, and when no matter what their social position, they seek to make them useful and practical, and able to take care of themselves in whatever state they may be called upon to fill, they have bestowed a fortune to them.

—Henry Huber, of Collins Grove, withdraws as a candidate for Treasurer, assigning as reasons for his action in the premises his advanced age, and precedent business engagements.

THE CHAMPION REAPER AND MOWER.—Standard Award, of Adamsburg, is agent for the above named machine. We can safely say that Mr. A. is just the man to act in that capacity and the machine he represents one of the best, in all respects, now in use. We bespeak for him a liberal share of patronage.

—J. W. Dresser has gone to Philadelphia for the purpose of making his Spring purchases, and expects, by Saturday, to open the finest assortment of Dry Goods, Dress Goods, &c., &c., at the most reasonable prices ever offered to the people of Middleburg and vicinity. He hereby extends a general invitation to every body to attend the opening of the ball.

SELINSGROVE, PENN.,
April 27, 1876.
Mr. Editor:—Owing to the lateness of the season, the spring business has not been unusually brisk so far, both town and country are awaiting the long deferred permanent settlement of the weather. Those of our citizens who possess real-estate, have everything in readiness, and Main Street will soon be strewn with the confused and combined noise of the saw, plane, hammer and trowel. As the severe and irksome winter is drawing to a close, people have an awakening from their lethargy and seem to be infused with new life and vigor, and by fall, despite the panic and other adverse circumstances, Selinsgrove will have shaken off the ashes of mourning, and will appear in a new dress—one that will be a credit to the town, architects and owners. Among the number who have commenced work are Messrs. Walter, Ely, Howes and Miller who purpose erecting not only good and substantial buildings, but intend making them as near fire proof as possible.

The River is in good order for rafting and the lumbermen of the North and West Branches are taking advantage of it.

Dyspepsia! Dyspepsia! Dyspepsia! It is the most pernicious of all human ailments. Its symptoms are almost infinite in their variety, and the torments and despondent victims of the disease often fancy themselves the prey, in turn, of every known malady. This is due, in part, to the close sympathy which exists between the stomach and the brain, and in part also to the fact that the organs of the digestive function necessarily disorganize the liver, the bowels and the nervous system, and affect, to some extent, the quality of the blood.
