

FOR GOVERNOR

Gen. John F. Hartranft, OF MONTGOMERY COUNTY.

FOR STATE TREASURER

Hon. Henry Rawle, OF KRUE COUNTY.

SHERIFF

JACOB P. BOGAR, Union Township.

COMMISSIONER

JOHN ROMIG, Penn Township.

DEPUTY

JOEL ROW, Middlesex Township.

TREASURER

HENRY BENFER, Franklin Township.

ASSOCIATE JUDGE DANIEL GEMBERLING, Penn Township.

AUDITOR

DANIEL DIEFFENBACH, Monroe Township.

NER B. MIDDLESWARTH, West Beaver Township.

It is stated that the Postmaster General will, on the assembling of Congress, suggest a modification of the present law governing newspaper postage.

Too many deplore all expenditures for educational purposes, without once considering the money value of education. It is not how well the money is expended, that should be jealously watched by citizens. More money could be used than is used for education, if applied judiciously, with very beneficial results.

As an instance of shoddy aristocracy meanness is reported from the South End, Boston, where a wealthy woman hired for a servant her own sister, treated her in all respects as a menial, and, though she and her husband, having no children, dined alone when no company was in the house they never permitted the sister to sit with them.

The old engine house at Harper's Ferry, in which John Brown and his party were stormed and captured, is used by an undertaker as a hearse house. The loop holes which the insurrectionists made have been bricked up, but the outlines can be readily traced. The places on the floor where one of Brown's sons died and the other was mortally wounded are pointed out by the villagers, although the blood stains that remained for several years have faded out.

The Lancaster correspondent of the New York Times says that Cameronism in this State "means nothing more than sensible politics." That is so. Three years ago it meant Hartranft, and he carried the State by over 35,000 majority, with the Philadelphia Press, New York Tribune, McClure, Curtis, and the Greeley Democrats and Liberals against him. This year it means Hartranft again, who will carry the State by a majority of not less than 40,000.

Hon. Henry Rawle.

Sketch of the Republican Nominees for State Treasurer.

Mr. Rawle is a native of Mifflin county, Pa., and was born in 1833. He was educated in Lancaster and West Chester, and in 1859, at the age of sixteen, was appointed by J. Edgar Thompson civil engineer on the Western division of the Pennsylvania Railroad. He continued the practice of his profession of engineering on different railroads of the State until the completion of the Philadelphia and Erie Railroad, from Warren to Erie in 1859, and then relinquished the profession and embarked in the iron business, starting a blast furnace at Sharon, Mercer county, Pa. His furnace was the second one in the Shenango Valley constructed for the melting of ores from the Lake Superior region with raw coal. In 1861 Mr. Rawle married Miss Harriet G., daughter of the late General Charles M. Reed, of Erie, and removed to that city in 1863, since which time he has been engaged in the transportation of coal and Lake Superior ore between Erie and Beaver Canal. In 1869 Mr. Rawle formed a company to build the first blast furnace in Erie, which has since been in continuous operation and furnished employment to a large force of laborers during the panic and subsequent hard times. In 1872 he organized the Erie Rolling Mill Company—the first enterprise of the kind in Erie—which has also kept a large force of workmen constantly employed and contributed largely to the business prosperity of the city. During all this period Mr. Rawle's relations to his workmen have been cordial and liberal, and he has uniformly given them every consideration.

Mr. Rawle was the projector of the Shenango and Allegheny Rail road, and was its President during its construction. This road developed the mineral resources of Eastern Mercer and Butler counties and reaches a point near the great Butler oil district. Mr. Rawle was one of the first Water Commissioners of Erie, and subsequently has been elected Mayor of that city for two successive terms. His executive abilities in these responsible offices have commended him to the people of his city and of the Northwest, and they are a unit in his support. Mr. Rawle has all his life been a large employer of laboring men, and the relations which he has sustained to his workmen have been thoroughly disinterested and highly advantageous to his employees and mutually profitable. There is no citizen of Northwest Pennsylvania who has given employment to a larger number of laborers and mechanics in the important industries of that section of our great State. He has always taken high views of the relations of labor and capital, and has regarded their interests as identical. For this reason he has treated his men liberally and fairly, and in such a manner as to endear them to him personally. Their regard for him is shown by the hearty and generous support they have always given him in his political campaigns.

Mr. Rawle, before the war, was a Douglas Democrat, but in 1860 joined the Republican standard, and has ever since voted the straight Republican ticket, and is regarded as one of the representative Republicans of the Northwest.

Opinions of the Press.

Republicans of Pennsylvania! The skies are bright with promises. Every section of the party press commend the work done so far. All the leaders are earnestly anxious for success this autumn. The masses are enthused and jubilant over the result of the Convention. The President stands boldly forth and commends the ticket nominated. And now, more than any time since the war, the grand old party feels all its pulses throbbing with healthy enthusiasm, with a high purpose, and a goal before it which is as high as any that ever inspired a party at any period of peace. We are marching on to an assured victory, we sincerely believe.

The Democrats are sorely tried on account of the passage of the anti-third term resolution by the Republican State Convention. It takes a weapon out of their hands which they might have used with some effect against the party, and they are at a loss what to do.

Now, whatever truth there may be in the declaration that Senator Cameron was favorable to the nomination of Rawle, it is certainly nothing for which the Senator deserves reproach. If Rawle's nomination is the work of a "ring," the best thing the party can do is to employ this organization to make all its nominations. We'll take a little more "ring" in ours, please.

The record of Governor Hartranft is too well known to need comment at this time, and while Mr. Rawle has never been engaged prominently in politics there is every reason to suppose, from his excellent reputation as a citizen and a business man, that the finances of the State will be administered by an honest and competent gentleman.

Governor Hartranft was renominated by acclamation. Henry Rawle, at present Mayor of the city of Erie, was nominated for State Treasurer. He is a gentleman of large and unblemished reputation. The Hon. Edward M'Pherson, clerk of the House of Representatives since 1860, was chairman of the Committee on Platform, and the resolutions reported are admirable in tone and spirit, and will be endorsed by the Republicans of the whole Union.

The platform is plain, straightforward and manly, and must meet with the hearty endorsement of the people. The contest for the State Treasuryship developed considerable strength for Hon. B. B. Strang, and while his nomination would have been gratifying to his many friends in this section, they cheerfully acquiesce in the will of the majority, and will labor with all the energy they can command to aid in rolling up a heavy majority for the ticket.

Mr. Rawle is so well and favorably known to the people of this part of the State as not to require any elaborate notice at our hands. It is enough to say that he is an eminent successful business man, and we still hold to the position that the qualities which are necessary to secure success in private life are also necessary to secure success in public life. Especially are correct habits of business necessary to the proper discharge of the duties of the office which Mr. Rawle will undoubtedly be called to fill. Personally, he is a gentlemanly, genial man, and what is more and better, he is not schooled in the tricks of the (political) trade; he will be a public officer fresh from the people, and therefore understanding the wants of the people. The party has started right again by returning to the source of all power—the people, and its future course, therefore, cannot be other than a march of victory.

The sale of the Northern Pacific Railroad and all its branches, franchises, appurtenances, &c. is advertised to take place in New York City on the 28th of August. The appurtenances, &c., embrace, among other things, sixty millions of acres of land, probably the largest body of land ever offered in fee at one time in this or any other country. A committee of bondholders will probably buy the road and reorganize the company. The bondholders who do not wish to enter the new company, will take their dividends out of the amount realized at the sale.

Two bushels of revolutionary iron cannon balls and a number of knives and bayonets were ploughed up in a field in Westchester county, New York, the other day, after having lain undisturbed for a hundred years.

A Brutal Murderer to be Hanged.

Albert Brown, negro, for whose execution on the 1st of July, the Governor has issued the death warrant, murdered a little girl aged about five years by cutting her throat after outraging her person. The crime was perpetrated in Bradford county, two or three miles from Minnetonka. The child had gone on a visit to her grandfather living a short distance from the residence of her father. The negro was employed by the former and was the only occupant of the house at the time of the girl's arrival. The fiend seized the child and accomplished his hellish purpose and afterward made an effort to escape. Fortunately he was run down by a train on the railroad and severely injured and placed under arrest. He was convicted and sentenced to be hanged on the 19th of January, but the case was taken to the supreme court, one of the pleas urged being that the murderer was insane when the crime was committed. The supreme court a few weeks ago affirmed the judgment of the Bradford county court. Brown has served five years in the penitentiary for rape.

A Man and Horse Instantly Killed by Lightning.

On Sunday afternoon last week, a fearful and sudden death occurred in Somerset county, Pennsylvania, near the town of Somerset. Four young men, residents of Jenner township, were on horseback riding home from attendance on Divine services at Casseber's church, and were quietly proceeding along the road when a storm came quickly upon them. Several flashes of lightning were observed when there came one blinding in its vividness. When it had passed away it was discovered that the bolt had struck and instantly killed one of the party, named Edmund Korman Mowry. The horse which he was riding also suffered death by the same bolt. Mowry's nearest companion was somewhat stunned, and had the hair burnt off one side of his head, but otherwise no one was affected. There were no trees or buildings by to attract the lightning, and its suddenness was one of the most appalling features. Young Mowry's body was removed to the home of his parents. He was their only child, a brother having been killed in the army. The death caused a gloom wherever the deceased was known.

Trouble Apprehended With the Indians.

As the visit of the Sioux to Washington to negotiate with the government for a relinquishment of their possession of the Black Hills has proved to be a failure, and as the Indians left here much dissatisfied, difficulties are apprehended between them and such whites who may enter their country for the purpose of seeking gold.

It is estimated by the agents that the Sioux can muster from 3,000 to 5,000 warriors, about half of them armed with rifles and the remainder with bows and arrows. The government in the meantime will endeavor to prevent adventures from going to that country, still having some hopes through the medium of commissioners to effect a treaty with the Sioux. A letter has been received here giving an account of a trip in May, undertaken by a party of the First United States Infantry through the Indian country, it having been reported that three long cabins had been erected last fall by miners as relay houses on their route to the Black Hills on Okinokoa creek, a tributary of the White river, and about 140 miles from the Brule agency, Dakota Territory. The object of the party was to destroy the cabins, but they failed to find any. The report proved to be false and put into circulation by the Indians.

The Clearfield miners have resumed work at the old price—fifty cents per ton—thus proving the strike to be a total failure, but matters have assumed a more distasteful aspect towards the miners. Besides losing a couple weeks' wages, they are now called upon to sign an agreement to engage in no strikes, and to connect themselves with no miner's association, and if they refuse they are forced to withdraw their tools from the mines—all the result of the strike. Nearly all the miners are signing the agreement, but some few are refusing.—Patriot

Mr. Geo. O. Evans, whose fame was so prominently before the public in connection with the collection of Pennsylvania's war claim against the general government died on Thursday, at his residence in West Philadelphia. Mr. Evans was fifty four years of age at the time of his decease.

It is said that the Pope has laid by 40,000,000 francs to meet possible adventures, and that if forced to leave Italy he will bring it with him.

Agents wanted. All classes of working people of both sexes, young and old, who make more money at work for us, in their own localities, during their spare moments, or all the time, than they do at home. We offer employment that will pay handsomely for every hour's work. Full particulars, terms, &c., sent free. Send us your address at once. No delay. Now is the time. Don't look for work or wait elsewhere, until you have learned what we offer. J. H. BROTHER & CO., Portland, Maine. June 2, 1875.

NEW BARBER SHOP AND TOBACCO STORE. Middleburg, Pa. Hair Cutting, Shaving, Shampooing, and Hair Dressing done in the best manner. TOBACCO & CIGARS. The best brands of tobacco and Cigars constantly on hand. No better quality, and at reasonable prices. Go and try some. JOHN J. BAIN. Sep. 21, 1874.

Sea Grove.

A Description of the New Settlement at Cape May.

At the extreme southern end of the State of New Jersey, an ever so-called boy will know, is the far-famed Cape May—known to us as a summer resort, and to the Cape May City and Cape May Point sections of the same locality, notwithstanding the fact that there is a distance of about two miles between these places; of course this is not great when we compare it with the great coast front of the entire State. It appears that when the founders of Cape May City began their settlement their object was to get as much of the Ocean Beach as possible, outside and away from the Delaware Bay, and at the same time to have a full view of the Point. It has often been wondered at that some one had not built even a small cottage for guests at this Point, and the reason why could hardly be answered. Several years ago, however, a gentleman from New York undertook the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the site has remained a wilderness until this spring, when Mr. Alexander Whillden, (the well-known enterprising Wool Merchant of No. 20 South Front Street, Philadelphia,) became inspired with the idea that an Incorporated Company might, by the direct location of New York, undertake the organization of a company for the development of this SITE, but not possessing sufficient funds to put their project into execution, the effort was abandoned. Years have come and gone, and the