THE POST.

Middleburg, July 29, 1875.

HOW A TOAD UNDRESSES.—An eye witness to the process thus describes a toad taking off his clothes. About the middle of July, I found a toad on a hill of melons, and, not wanting him to leave, hoed around him. He appeared sluggish and not inclined to move. Presently I observed him pressing his elbows against his sides, rubbing downward. He appeared so singular that I watched to see what he was up to. After a few smart rubs, his skin began to burst open straight along his back. Now, said I old fellow, you have done it; but he appeared to be unconcerned, and kept on rubbing until he had worked down all his skin into folds on his sides and hips; then, grasping one hind leg with his hands, he hauled off one leg of his pants the same as any body would, then stripped the other leg in the same way. He then took his cast-off cuticle forward, between his forelegs into his mouth, and swallowed it; then, by raising and lowering his head, swallowing as his head came down, he stripped off the skin underneath until it came to his forelegs, and then grasping one of these with the opposite hand, by considerable pulling stripped off the skin. Changing hands, he stripped the other, and by a slight motion of the head, he drew it from the throat and swallowed the whole. The operation seemed to me an agreeable one, and occupied but a short time.

☞ The following description of the voracious grasshopper is from a circular issued by the Commissioner of Agriculture, Hon. Frederick Watts, of Connecticut county: "The destructive insect is almost identical with our common red-legged grasshopper, differing only in the length of the wing, which is somewhat longer. The shape is just the same. It was been stated that the grasshopper which has appeared in Virginia is of the true Kansas breed. This is not true, and alarm on that account need not be felt. The destructive grasshopper is of the Alpine species. The South American grasshopper is an ominous fellow, four and five inches long, and ugly looking. The bird that John the Baptist used to eat are of medium size, and belong to the Asiatic and African tribes. While the ravages of the insect threaten to be very bad in Kansas, Nebraska and Missouri, it is not unlikely that a second planting of grain, vines and vegetables may wholly escape. The experience gained last year in devising efficient methods for their extermination is considered very valuable."
