

THE POST. Kitching, Sept. 23, 1875. Local News, &c.

Republican Standing Committee. The members of the Republican Standing Committee are requested to meet at 10 o'clock on Friday, September 25, 1875, at 1 o'clock p. m. on a full and punctual attendance is required. Wm. H. BEAVER, Chairman. G. P. Moyer, Secretary.

Are our farmers laying by their best specimens of field productions for the coming fall? W. Hoopes, 20. FRUIT SALE.—Dr. Myers will sell his house and lot situated in Kitztown, on Friday, October 10th, at 1 o'clock P. M. Terms: ten percent cash, balance in five annual payments.

Walking horse races have come into use at Western farms. It is urged in favor of such contests that horses able to walk for three to five miles an hour, are more valuable to farmers, for farm work, than those that trot a mile in two and twenty.

CUT THIS OUT AND STICK IT IN YOUR HAT.—The date of holding the next election is Tuesday, November 2, and voters should bear in mind that Friday, October 31, is the last day on which they can pay taxes; also that Friday, October 31, is the last day for taking out naturalization papers.

As the hunting season has opened, we would warn those who indulge in the sport to be careful, for our experience and the history of the past eighteen centuries incline us to believe that no matter how well you treat a shot gun nor how you bring it up, it will hang the stuffing out of you the very first time it gets a chance.

REUNION.—If the weather is fair there will be an immense assemblage of people in this place, on Tuesday, Oct. 5, being the second day of the fair, and also the time for a reunion of our soldiers of the late war, of this and adjoining counties. The necessary information is being distributed in these places, and it is expected that all who have claims will be present. If all come who have promised, and we have no doubt they will, it will make a lively day for Middleburg, and one that will be long remembered by the soldiers, who took part in the reunion.

OUR RAILROAD.—Last week several of the bond-holders of the S. & L. R. R. passed over the road with a hired car stopping at the different stations, with a view of settling down on Tuesday, 22d inst., they intended to do this place, and it is expected that all who have claims will be present. If all come who have promised, and we have no doubt they will, it will make a lively day for Middleburg, and one that will be long remembered by the soldiers, who took part in the reunion.

At a special meeting of the Keystone Literary Society the following resolutions in regard to the death of Milton M. Dreese of Adamsburg, Pa., were unanimously adopted: That it is with deep grief and sorrow that we have learned of the death of our friend and associate, Milton M. Dreese, and that we sympathize with his bereaved family, extending our hearty sympathy and regret at the loss of their loved one.

Resolved, that in the unexpected loss which we have sustained by his death we recognize the hand of that Divine Being who thought high in the estimation of all who know him and who was constantly growing, not only in intellectual attainments, but in the noblest love and respect which we cherish for him, as a high toned gentleman and a kind and beloved friend.

Resolved, that these resolutions be published in the Freeman (Kitching), Middleburg Post, and the Western Standard, and that we present a copy of them to the bereaved family, extending our hearty sympathy and regret at the loss of their loved one.

In his Essay on the Human Mind and its Education, published in 1857, John Reynolds, of Illinois, says: "It is a sin to neglect the culture of that bright gem, the spark of nature's fire, the poet calls it, and to permit the mind to remain clouded and shrouded in the impenetrable gloom of ignorance. There is no business of life that can be as well done by an ignorant person as by an educated and intelligent one. In the most humble and common business of a mechanic or day laborer, education is necessary in order that the work may be performed in a neat and becoming manner, rather than in a clumsy way. If a laborer is engaged in working on the streets, it is much better for him to be able to judge with good sense what tools it is best to use, and the best manner of using them to advance his work with most ease to himself and benefit to his employer, than to be unable to do so, and to be a mere tool himself, governed by the hands of others. In making fences, driving team, plowing, or doing any kind of work that might be named, education and intelligence are a great service. The workman who is intelligent does not only perform his work better than one who is ignorant, but he receives employment where the other does not. Educated labor receives also better pay than uneducated."

The blessings of education are beyond comparison. There is no wealth, station, or earthly consideration equal to the judicious and proper education of the human intellect. It elevates the human family into that region of happiness and bliss into which the lower and sordid instincts and passions are not permitted to enter.

There is nothing that walks the creation that can be compared to a properly educated man. Judicious education develops and strengthens all the faculties of the mind, and gives vigor and power to the understanding. It gives compass and power to the human intellect to embrace all benefits and blessings that will add to the well being and happiness of the human race.

With all this intended blessings of religion, its pure and holy light makes but a faint impression on man without a competent education. Christianity cannot prosper in a dark and benighted land. It requires intelligence and enlightened liberality to cause it to produce the beneficial and happy effects that it is capable of accomplishing when properly understood and appreciated. There is no great principle or institution on earth that absolutely demands intelligence more than religion does. Both history and observation teach this as emphatically that it is impossible to misunderstand it or forget it.

The above views, though those of a layman, are not expressed in the best language, and notwithstanding in complete accord with those of all the great minds that have ever benefited the world. Reynolds on Education.

It is to the youth now growing up that the future fortunes of the State will be committed. They will direct its movements, control its politics, and guide its destinies. Therefore, it is all important that they should be instructed, and that their intellectual growth should keep pace with their physical.

No sadder or more enlightened views on the importance of the education of the people, were ever entertained by any of the greatest minds of the world, than those by Governor Reynolds.

On the importance of employing well qualified teachers, his views were equally sound. He said: "The judicious and proper performance of the duties of a teacher, demand talents and abilities of the highest order, and learned attainments. The most distinguished characters of the earth—those whose fame and works have spread all over the world—were teachers."

Believing it then the solemn duty of every parent to give his children the best possible education within his ability, as a stern officer, it is my duty to see that they have the proper advantages to receive such education—that they have competent instructors, and all the conveniences and comforts necessary to prosecute their studies with success and satisfaction. That I may be able to perform the work devolving upon me, to the fullest extent possible, I must have your entire cooperation. It will not do for some to draw one way, and others another. There must be a united effort. Having become thoroughly acquainted with the educational wants of the county, I believe that I can recommend to every parent and to every school, the best possible, and also the most economical way of doing it. Therefore, that the schools may begin under favorable circumstances, I would recommend the following to both directors and parents: 1. That none but competent teachers be employed; 2. That no encouragement be given to incompetent ones to have themselves examined; 3. That no applicants be sent into any district with petitions to obtain the signatures of the patrons; 4. That the blackboards, wherever necessary, be enlarged and improved so as to accommodate the largest classes with a suitable surface; 5. That the seats for the smaller pupils be made sufficiently low for them to sit with comfort and ease. If efforts are made in this, good teachers can be found for all the schools in the county, and hence no valid reason can be assigned for employing poor ones.

That a teacher may be competent, more is necessary than that he has "kept school" a number of years. He must not only have a good knowledge of the branches to be taught, but he must understand the best methods of imparting instruction. If he fails in the latter, he should give way to another, qualified for the work.

A teacher who reads no news-paper or education journal, and who does not avail himself of the advantages of Teachers' Institutes and other means of improvement with his reach, should seek employment in some other channel than that of teaching.

A student will be benefited by a good teacher who is not only qualified to do his work, but who is also a good citizen. It is no use to send a student to a school where the teacher is a bad man, and the school is a bad place. A student should be sent to a school where the teacher is a good man, and the school is a good place.

A student should be sent to a school where the teacher is a good man, and the school is a good place. A student should be sent to a school where the teacher is a good man, and the school is a good place.
