THE POST.

Middleburg, Feb 3d, 1876.

PUT HIM DOWN.—There is a feeling of jealousy that seems to be innate in some natures. There are many persons who can neither look with pleasure or approbation on the successful accomplishments of their neighbors, and if by honest worth one struggle to achieve an unblemished reputation, there are many anxious and ready to pick flaws both in his personal character and business relations, their motives being prompted by no reasonable prejudice, but being rather impelled by their inordinate selfishness and envy. If a young man just starting in life, with buoyant hopes and laudable ambition, struggle to assert his mental and moral supremacy, there is often a strong feeling created against him, and many jealously exclaim: "Put him down," as if one's envy estate had no native-born right to rise above the level in which he was created. Would it not in the mind of man, seem more like [illegible] charity to aid and encourage that struggles to enlarge his help itself.

THE DOOM OF POLIGAMY.—In the recent case of the United States against George Reynolds, tried in Salt Lake City for bigamy, Chief Justice White very clearly defined the crime and told the jury that it was no defence to say that the defendant was under the influence of a religious belief." As the Post says, this is according to law and common sense. A citizen of New York might believe in the religious obligation of human sacrifices, and nobody could lawfully interfere with his enjoyment of the belief; but let him undertake to make a sacrificial offering of a man, woman or child; and he would speedily hear from the police. Freedom of faith never implies freedom to violate law. The Reynolds' case will go to the Supreme Court of the United States, and it is hoped that there will be no delay in the hearing of the appeal. If the court of last resort affirms the judgement, as there is no reason to doubt that it will do, the mormons will be without an excuse for law-breaking. They may then believe in polygamy as heartily as they choose, but they must not practice it. This twin relic of barbarism has long enough been one of the disgraceful anomalies of our social decency.

GOLDEN GRAINS.—If a borrower comes lend him your ear.

Women always give more than they promise—men less.

He can never speak well that can never hold his tongue. He who can talk only on one subject is seldom wanted.

The greatest misfortune of all is not to be able to bear misfortune.

Sooner or later we pardon our friends the injuries we have done them.

Love is like liquor: men say it is killing them, but they always come back to it.

Not everyone who has the gift of speech, understands the value of silence.

Unfriended, indeed, is he who has no friend bold enough to point out his faults.

There is no such thing as liberty—for no man is free if he is the slave of his conscience.

Weigh others as you would be weighed yourself, and the scales would have a sinecure.

If you become famous, beware of the fools, for they always gather around the people who are stared at.

A note from a [illegible] how tender, is a sight draft on you—you must always pay in some coin or other.

Young vows of everlasting friendship are foolish. If ever kept they are kept by accident—not by resolution.

SELF DEPENDENCE.—Many an unwise parent works hard and lives sparingly all his life for the purpose of leaving enough to give his children a start in the world, as it is [illegible] Setting a young man afloat [illegible] money left him by his relatives [illegible] like tying bladders under the arms of one who cannot swim; it serves to one, he will lose his bladders and go to the bottom. Teach him to swim and he will not need the bladders. Give your child a second education.

See to it that his morals are pure, his mind cultivated, and his whole nature made subservient to the laws which govern man, and you have given what will be of more value than the wealth of the Indies. You have given him a start which no misfortune can deprive him of. The earlier you teach him to depend on his own resources and the blessings of God, the better.

☞What is the difference btween a belle and a burglar? The belle carries false locks, and the burglar false keys.

☞Just as sure as a little boy gets hold of an unloaded pistol it is sure to go off and kill some one.—How the charge gets in there is a mystery.

☞A little five-year old boy was heard saying to his brother, "I know what amen means. It means, 'You musn't touch it,' mamma told me so," which was his childish but literal interpretation of "So let it be."

☞William B. Thompson, the Arkansas murderer who was hung the other day, and who kissed his hand to the ladies just previous to stepping down through the trap, was a finished gentleman—in about fifteen minutes.
