Stick to Your Bush.

Mr. Morgan was a rich, and also a good man. The people of the town respected him, sent him to Parliament, and seldom undertook anything without asking his advice. If a school house was to be built, the plan had to be talked over with him. Widow P——asked him what she should plant in her field, farmer S——always got his advice in buying cattle, and Mrs.—— consulted him about bringing up her boys.

When asked how he was so successful, Mr. Morgan said: "I will tell you how it was. One day, when I was a lad, a party of boys and girls were going to a distant pasture to pick whortleberries. I wanted to go with them, but was fearful that my father would not let me.—When I told him what was going on, and he at once gave me permission to go with them, I could hardly contain myself for joy, and rushed into the kitchen and got a big basket, and asked mother for a luncheon. I had the basket on my arm, and was just going out of the gate, when my father called me back. He took hold of my hand, and said, in a very gentle voice: "Joseph, what are you going for, to pick berries or to play?" "To pick berries," I replied. "Then, Joseph, I want to tell you one thing, it is this: When you find a good bush, do not leave it to find a better one. The other boys and girls will run about, picking a little here and there, wasting a great deal of time, and not getting many berries.

If you do as they do, you will come home with an empty basket. If you want berries, stick to your bush."

"I went with the party, and we had a capital time. But it was just as my father said. No sooner had one found a good bush then he called to the rest, and they left their several places and ran off to the new found treasure. Not content more than a minute or so in one place, they rambled over the whole pasture got very tired, and at night had but very few berries. My father's word kept running in my ears, and I 'stuck to my bush.' When I had done with one, I found another. When night came, I had a large basket of nice berries, more than all the others put togethes, and was not half so tired as they were. I went home happy. But when I entered I found my father had been taken ill. He looked at my basketful of ripe blackberries, and said, "Well done Joseph.—Was it not just as I told you? Always stick to your bush." He died a few days after, and I had to make my way in the world as best I could. But my father's words sunk deep into my mind, and I never forgot the experience of the whortleberries—I "stuck to my bush."

When I had a fair place, and was doing well, I did not leave it and spend weeks and months in finding one a little better. When other young men said:

"Come with us, and we will make a fortune in a few weeks." I shook my head and "stuck to my bush." Presently my employers offered to take me into business with them. I stayed with the old house until the principals died, and then I had everything I wanted.——The habit of sticking to my business led people to trust me, and gave me a character. I owe all I have and am to this motto—"Stick to your bush."—

Curous Old Women.

Near Stanton, Somerset county, died two very aged women, sisters, the elder aged 87 years and the younger 82. They resided with the family of a son of one of them, and had both become somewhat childish and intractable several months prior to their death. They were sick at the same time, and occupied beds in the same room footing each other. It is related by a neighbor that the two old women quarreled just a short time previous to their death, about the position in which the Bible should be placed upon a table in the room, and each was bound to have her way. Too feeble to move, they lay in bed and, in the manner of little children, called each other bad "names," meanwhile shaking their fists in a way they probably thought was very threatening. It had been the boast of each that she would live longer than her sister; and at last when the younger women peacefully passed from earth, the elder seemed for a moment to glory in the fact that she had won the race. But it was not for long. Even before the body of her dead sister was cold, she too relinquished her feeble hold on life, and slept the sleep that knows no waking this side the portals of the tomb.—Johnstown Tribune
