A Hundred Years Hence

A hundred years hence, What a change will be made, In political, morais. Religion and trade ! In statesmen who wrangle Or ride on the fonce— How things will be altored A hundred years hence.

The bends of the ladice Such changes may find-We do not speak now Of mutation of mind, From three bushel bonnets To saug little bats, The scoops Navariness. The gypeles and flats.

With furs and with ribands With feathers and flowers. Some fashioned by artists, Some plucked from the bowers, Bat heads will be changed too, In science and sense, Before we have numbered A hundred years hence.

Our laws will be then The pleasures of vice Are a silly protence, And people will know it A hundred years hence.

All vice will be seen, When the people awake To rise out of folly-'Tie all a mistake, The Lawyers and Doctors, And Ministers, too, Will have, I am thinking, But little to do.

Their careful attention Their careful attention They then may bestow, On raising polatoes Or turnips, you know, Or any employment They choose to commence For arts will be many A bundred years hence.

Mr. Hayes the dead silence of the dead silence o sharp "click! click!" sounded fear-fully distinct in the dead ailence. The wild animal made a quick morement, but Jack lay like a stone, and in a moment his unknown ene-my seemed alcep again. Would the morning never come? Jack dared not fire in the darkness, for if he missed his aim, and the creature proved indeed a beast of prey, there was no chance for him. With his finger upon the trigger, and in aching anxiety for the first light to show him the outlines of his dreaded companion. Minutes seemed hours. As an officer he was noted not only for strict loyalty to his superi-ors, but for gallantry in battle and allacrity in the discharge of every duty, however perilous or arduous. The first suggestion of his nomi-nation for Governor was strongly disfavored by the General, who put a quietus upon the movement in that direction as soon as he beard of it. He generally preferred to remain in the military service as long as the rebellion lasted, and no political pro-motion was any temptation for him to loave it while the triamph of the na-tional arms was incomplete. During the war he was nominated for Congess by the Republicans of the Second District and directly afterwards receisered a letter impor-tuning him to return home and make the canvass. General Hayes replied to this let-ter as follows :
