Ayer's
Hair Vigor,
For restoring Gray Hair to its natural Vitality and Color.

A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color, with the gloss and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich glossy lustre and a grateful perfume.

HAIR DRESSING,

A Night of Suffering.

The Middletown (N. Y.) Argus tells the following story: Few of the raftsmen and lumber operators of the upper Delaware have not been familiar for years with the legless ferryman, who for nearly half a century, and until a few weeks ago, gained a livelihood by ferrying persons across the Delaware near Easton, Pa. This man, whose name was Rinaldo Moser, died lately, aged sixty-six years.

When he was a boy the Delaware river was navigated by the now almost forgotten Durham boats, and young Moser Moser was employed in running one. Forty-nine years ago this winter, Moser Jacob, a brother of his, a man named Jerome Miller, and a boy about his own age, called Shallow Courright, were running one of these boats, which was very heavily laden. When near Bristol they were caught in a violent storm, and being unable to guide their boat to either the Pennsylvania or Jersey shore, where compelled to run it on an island. It was getting dark, and the storm increased in fury. There was nothing on the island with which to build a fire, and nothing that afforded them any protection. It was bitter cold, and the stranded crew tried to keep themselves warm by walking up and down the island.

Their boat was loaded with whisky in barrels. It was suggested by one of the party that they roll one of the barrels out on the island and set fire to it. Jacob Moser had his feet badly frozen by this time and the cold storm was beginning to tell on the others. The barrel was with difficulty taken from the boat and stood on end on the island. The head was knocked in, so that the liquor might be set on fire. Then it was discovered, to the horror, of all, that not one of the party had anything wherewith to make fire.

Poised in this last attempt to save themselves from freezing, Jacob lost all heart, and succumbed to the cold, despite the efforts of his comrades to keep him stirring. He died in a short time. Courtright climbed into the barrel of whisky, and when the party was rescued the next morning he was the least injured of the whole. His ears were frozen so that they afterward dropped off, and his face was terribly frost-bitten. Otherwise he was saved from the cold, but the whisky had made one compact blister of his skin from the waist down.

Young Moser and Miller kept up their fight with death all night long. People who remember that night say it was the most fearful ever known along the Delaware. The wind blew a gale, and there was a storm, not of snow, but actually of pellets of ice! The mercury was at zero. Against this awful war of elements the boy and Miller bore up until daybreak. When they were discovered, and saw a boat hurrying to their rescue, young Moser fell senseless to the ground. Miller never lost consciousness, although his hands, ears and face were frozen white.

Rinaldo Moser was restored to consciousness but his legs were so terribly frozen that amputation of both of them at the thigh was found to be necessary. He recovered in due time and became as robust and hearty as any man on the river. He was the last survivor of that awful night, Miller having been drowned the following summer, and Courtright dying a few years ago in a New Jersey poorhouse.

How young he recovered from the shock of that night's experience, Rinaldo Moser supported himself by rowing and ferrying people across the river. He was remarkably dexterous with his oars, and a scientific fisherman. The facility with which he got around on his legless body was wonderful. He was sixty-six years old at the time of his death.

WE BELIEVE IN FORTUNE TELLING.—"Do you believe in fortune telling?" asks a young correspondent. Yes, certainly we do, and practice it too. Would you like a few trials of our skill? Well, then, give attention. When a boy with black hair and eyes always tells the truth, he will be believed and respected as long as he lives, and as the people would prefer to keep him alive, he will, stand a good chance, to arrive at old age. A girl with brown hair and blue eyes, who obeys her parents is good tempered and industrious, will have many admirers, particularly among sensible men, and will therefore be in the way of getting a good husband. If a girl with rosy cheeks and curly hair will avoid late hours, tight dresses, too many nice things to eat, will take plenty of exercise in the open air, and keep good natured, she will probably be a good-looking and happy lady, and if she obtains a good constitution, she will be a fit wife for a governor or president. In all these cases the hair and eyes are of no great importance, but the other [illegible] must be strictly observed to [illegible] good fortune come out right.

A Philadelphia man had a [illegible] of thousand dollars, which he wished to deposit in a secure place. Recent occurrences destroyed his confidence in banks. So he sought for a more secure depository for his wealth. He thought he found such a place in his cellar. At any rate there is where he deposited the cash, concealing it between some sheet lead such as is used to line tea chests. But the faithless man's dream of fancied security was somewhat rudely dispelled. He discovered to his dismay that a man occupying the house with him sold the sheet lead to a junk dealer, and that the two thousand had gone with it. Some suspicious capitalist is now [illegible] in a frantic search for that junk dealer.

Is Your Hair Falling Out
OR TURNING GRAY!
If So Do Not Fail To Use
LONDON HAIR COLOR RESTORER.

The Great Reputation

Which it has attained and the large number of testimonials which are constantly being received are conclusive proof of its great value.

Proof Positive—A New Suit of Hair, Natural Color and Beauty Restored.

Dr. Swayne & Son—Some six years ago, I began to loose my hair, and continued to do so until the scalp became as bare as the palm of my hand, troubled also with a disagreeable itching fever, great heat and dandruff, small pustules would form, quite sore to the touch, and the remaining portion of the hair, on the side and back of the head, became quite gray. After using a number of Restoratives, (so called), without success, and my head nearly destitute of hair, I reluctantly commenced using the

"London Hair Color Restorer and Dressing."

Now, through its use, candor and justice compel me to say to all that I now possess a new and beautiful growth of hair, completely restored to its original dark and glossy appearance, and I venture the assertion, the world furnishes no preparation equal to this, and I do conscientiously say to all whose gray or thin, hairdry and harsh or falling, to use at once this cleanly and delightfully perfumed article.

ISAAC B. MARSHAL,
Gunner U. S. N., 830 Leonard street, Phila.

Dr. Dalton of Philadelphia, says of it: The London Hair Color Restorer is used very extensively among my patients and friends, as well as by myself; I therefore speak from experience.
