VEGETINE

PURIFIES THE BLOOD, RENOVATES & INVIGORATES THE WHOLE SYSTEM.

Its Medical Properties are Alterative, Tonic, Solvent and Diuretic

VEGETINE is made eXclusively from the juices of carefully selected barks, roots and herbs, and so strongly concentrated, that it will effectually eradicate from the system every taint of Scrofula, Scrofulous Humor, Tumors, Cancer, Cancerous Humor, Erysipelas, Salt Rheum, Syphilitic Diseases, Canker, Faintness at the Stomach, and all diseases that arise from impure blood. Sciatica, Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Gout and Spinal Complaints, can only be effectually cured through the blood.

For Ulcers and Eruptive Diseases of the Skin, Pustules, Pimples, Blotches, Boils, Tetter, Scald-head and Ringworm, VEGETINE has never failed to effect a permanent cure.

For Pains in the Back, Kidney Complaints, Dropsy, Female Weakness, Leucorrhœa, arising from internal ulceration and uterine diseases and General Debility, VEGETINE acts directly upon the causes of these complaints. It invigorates and strengthens the whole system, acts upon the secretive organs, allays inflamation, cures ulceration and regulates the bowels.

For Catarrh, Dyspepsia, Habitual Costiveness, Palpitation of the Heart, Headache, Piles, Nervousness and General Prostration of the Nervous System, no medicine has given such perfect satisfaction as the VEGETINE. It purifies the blood, cleanses all of the organs, and possesses a controlling power over the nervous system.

The remarkable cures effected by VEGETINE have induced many physicians and apothecaries whom we know to prescribe and use it in their own families.

In fact, VEGETINE is the best remedy yet discovered for the above diseases, and is the only reliable Blood Purifier yet placed before the public.

THE BEST EVIDENCE.

The following letter from Rev. E. S. Best, Pastor of M. E. church, Natick, Mass., will be read with interest by many physicians, also those suffering from the same disease as afflicted the son of the Rev. E. S. Best. No person can doubt this testimony, as there is no doubt about the curative powers of VEGETINE:

NATICK, Mass., Jan. 1, 1874.

Mr. H. R. STEVENS: Dear Sir—We have a good reason for regarding your VEGETINE a medicine of the greatest value. We feel assured that it has been the means of saving our son's life. He is now seventeen years of age, for the last two years he has suffered from necrosis of his leg, caused by a rofulous affection, and was so far reduced that nearly all who saw him thought his recovery impossible. A council of able physicians could give us but the faintest hope of his ever rallying, two of the number declaring that he was beyond the reach of human remedies, that even amputation could not save him, as he had not vigor enough to endure the operation. Just then we commenced giving him VEGETINE, and from that time to the present he has been gaining rapidly, and has lately resumed his studies, thrown away his crutches and cane, and walks about cheerfully and strong.

Though there is still some discharge from the opening where the limb was fractured, we have the fullest confidence that in a little time he will be perfectly cured.

He has taken about three dozen bottles of VEGETINE, but lately feels but little, as he declares that he is too well to be taking medicine.

Respectfully yours, E. S. BEST.
Mrs L. C. F. BEST.

ALL DISEASES OF THE BLOOD.

If VEGETINE will relieve pain, cleanse, purify and cure such a disease as rheumatism, restoring the patient to perfect health after trying different physicians, many remedies, suffering for years in fact conclusive proof, if you are a sufferer, you can be cured? Why is this medicine performing such great cures? It works in the blood, in the circulating fluid. It can truly be called the Great Blood Purifier. The great source of disease originates in the blood; and no medicine that does not act directly upon it, to purify and renovate, has any just claim upon the public attention.

Recommend it Heartily.

SOUTH BOSTON, Feb. 7, 1870.

Mr. STEVENS: Dear Sir—I have taken several bottles of your Vegetine and am convinced it is a valuable remedy for Dyspepsia, Kidney Complaint, and general debility of the system.

I can heartily recommend it to all suffering from the above complaints. Yours respectfully.
MRS. SOPHIE PARKER,

Poetry.

Motherless.

The voice of the speaker was husky,
The eyes full of tears, as she said:
"If only I still had a mother
To go to—but mother is dead!"

Her head was bowed low on her bosom,
Thus hiding the tears that she shed,
As sadly and softly she murmured:
"No mother—my mother is dead."

No mother! Oh! lonely and weary
Of life, with its pleasures so few,
And no one to go to for comfort,
No one like a mother so true!

I know how the heat, thus embittered,
Finds refuge, like a bird in its nest,
From the storms that around it are breathing,
Alone on a dear mother's breast.

Years, many and weary, have pencilled
With silver the hair on my brow,
But still, as in days of my childhood
I sometimes am weeping there now.

And if in the dusk of Life's evening
No mother awaits me below,
I know not, when darkness surrounds me,
To whom in my sorrow to go.

There are others that love me and chide me,
Whose friendship to me is most dear,
But ah! there is none like a mother
To go to in anguish and fear!

I pity thee, friend, without mother—
But One can bring comfort like she
Go to Him, and trust Him forever—
He will be a mother to thee!

Select Tale.

How She Came to Have Him.

BY MARY REED CROWELL.

'So you won't have me, Nellie? You are sure you won't marry me?

Pretty little Mrs. Nellie Willard looked meditatively out of the window into the quiet village street, as if among the leafless trees and on the frost bound landscape she should find the answer to Horace Levison's question. Then after a moment, she turned her face toward him—a face as fresh and fair in its peachy bloom as many a young girl's ten years her junior.

"I—I am afraid I can't, Mr Levison.

Mr. Levison looked her straight in her bright blue eyes—such lovely blue eyes, soft as velvet, and the color of a violet that has bloomed in the shade.

"You are afraid you can't, Mrs Willard? Answer me another question yes or no do you love me?'

She blushed and smiled, and looked bewitchingly. Why, Mr. Levison, I mean Harry, of course I do—like you! I always did, ever since I first knew you years and years ago.'

'When Will Willard, won the prize all fellows were striving for! So you liked me then, Nellie, and you like me now? Then why won't you marry me? You've been a widow for three years now. Isn't that long enough to mourn the virtues of the departed?'

'You wicked man! As if three hundred years could ever teach me to forget poor dear Wilson.'

Her bright eyes reproved him sharply, and he accepted with good grace.

'Granting the truth, Nelly, that your deceased husband was a good fellow and a loving partner. I still cannot see why you refuse me. That is the subject under consideration at present, Nellie! Why won't you marry me?' Then Mrs. Willard's face grew a little paler, and her plump, fair hands trembled.

'Because, Harry, because Wilson Willard made me promise never to marry again.' 'Stuff and nonsense! What if he did? A bad promise is better broken than kept.'

Mrs. Willard twisting her ring uneasily, and looking at the illuminated wield of the stone. 'I know it is,' she said, slowly, 'but'—

Mr. Levison looked earnestly at her.

'Yes, 'but' what Nellie? In all respect say it—poor Will is dead and gone, and you've been true to his memory all these long years, and what has he to do with you?'

'I know,' she said again, meditatively, 'but—but, Harry, he made me solemnly promise never to marry again under penalty of his everlasting displeasure. And don't be angry with me, Harry, will you? But I almost know he would appear to me!'

The lovely blue eyes were lifted in such piteous appeal to his, and the pretty little widow made such a nervous little nestle near to him that it was the most human thing in the world for Mr. Levison to put his arm protectingly around her and assure her he was not angry with her. 'So you believe he would haunt you, Nellie, if you broke your promise? A sensible little woman like you to veritably believe in such superstitions fol-de-rol! And after having waited for ten years of your married life, and three years of your widowhood, you condemn me hopelessly for the sake of such a shadow as your husband's ghost!'

And Nellie looked imploringly at him again, and her lips quivered, and the tears stood in great crystals on her long lashes.

"O, Harry, how cruel you are! You know I love you better than all the world, only—I dare not marry again! Don't be angry—please don't be angry with me.

And Mr. Levison looked down at her lovely face, and assured her he never would be angry, with her and then away, heaping silent maledictions on the head of the defunct husband who had been tyrant enough to burden his lovely young wife with a promise.

The last sunset rays were flinging their golden and scarlet pennons on the pale blue sky when M. Levison opened the door of his cozy sitting room, at home, to be met by the laughing face and gay welcome of a young gentleman, who had evidently been making himself at home while he waited. Heigho, Levison! Surprised to see me? Howare you old fellow—how are you?'

Mr. Levison started a second, then greeted him warmly.

'Fred Willard! Where in the name of goodness did you spring from?—Why, I thought you were not to sail from England for a good six months yet. Old boy, bless you I'm glad to see you, although, for the instant, I confess I was startled—you are a living image of your brother, Wilson. We've been discussing ghosts you know—'

Young Willard's eyes gleamed mischievously, as he interrupted irreverently.

'We,' is good, Lev. You mean my pretty little sister-in-law, of course? I know she religiously believed in 'em, I know I am impatient to see her—for the first time since Will's funeral.'

Mr. Levison had been looking thoughtfully at the embers glowing like melted rubies, behind the silver bars of the grate; now he turned suddenly to Fred, and laid his hand persuasively on his shoulder.

"See here, Fred; you are a friend of mine, and I am about to put your friendship to the test. I want you to do me a very great favor will you?"

Fred laughed.

Will I? Of course I will. What's up? And Mr. Levison turned the keys of the doors and the consultation lasted until the housekeeper rung the dinner bell.

Five hours later the moon was just creeping over the tops of the trees, making a perfect flood of silver-gold glory on the quiet scene, and Mrs. Willard, with a fleecy white zephyr shawl and her crepe brown hair, was standing at the kitchen door, on her return from a tour of inspection to the snug little barn and carriage house, which she had personally seen was secure for the night ever since her husband's death.

Her cheeks were flushed to the tint of an oleander flower by the keen kiss of the frosty air, and her eyes were glowing like the blue fires as she stood there one moment in the broad band of white moonlight that lay athwart the floor like a silent blessing. Then, with a little involuntary exclamation at the perfect beauty of the night, she went in, locked the door after her, for her three servants were all retired for the night, and then gave a little shriek, for, standing in the self same accustomed place he was wont to occupy, and looking as natural as if it were himself in the flesh, was her husband. She testified her shiek and tried bravely to feel brave, but her heart was tearing around very undisciplined ly as she realized that she was looking upon a bona fide ghost—a veritable inhabitant of the land of eternal shadows.

'Will!' she said, faintly, with her hand tight on the handle of the door, 'Will, is it you?'

His voice was precisely as it had been in the old days—mellow, musical, a little domineering—Will's undeniably unmistakably.

'Who should it be but I Nelly, and come on purpose to communicate with you.'

'You?' she gasped; 'but what for? I have tried—I have done everything that I thought you would wish. There is nothing wrong, Will?'

The pale, moonlighted face, the speckless black suit, the spotless linen the very same in which he had been buried, the low, familiar voice—it almost paralized Nellie, and yet, allied by the very material contact of the door knob she stood her ground, and listened.

'Nothing is wrong with you, Nellie, but with me. I can't rest in my grave knowing the wrong I unintentionally committed in binding you to perpetual widowhood for my sake. I come to revoke my decision, to give you my full permission to marry again, and my advice to marry Horace Levison. Promise me you will do it, and I will rest peacefully forever.'

'Oh, Will! If you say so—if you think it best—yes!—yes, I will!'

Her face was pale enough now to have passed for a ghost herself.

"Go look at the big clock in the dining room, Nellie, and see if it is near the stroke of twelve.'

She went dumbly, mechanically, at his behest; and when she came back he was gone, and the moonlight streamed in on an empty room.

Then the reaction followed, and Nellie flew up to her bedroom, and locked the door, and covered her head with a shawl and sobbed and cried hysterically until her over wrought nerves found relief of sleep.

The next day Mr. Levison sent a little note over, apologizing for his seeming discourtesy in not coming to bid her good bye on his sudden departure for an indefinite time, and telling her that her cruel decision never to marry again had been the cause of it, and that they might never meet again, etc.,

To which Nellie, all pale, alarmed and crimson with confusion, penciled an answer, assuring him she had changed her mind, and begging him to come over to lunch, to see her, and meet her brother in law, who had only just arrived from abroad.

Of course Mr. Levison came and it didn't take two minutes to settle it, nor did he laugh at her when she solemnly related her experience of the night before.

'For it was his ghost, Harry, just as true as I am alive and speaking to you!'

'A jolly old—I mean, a thoughtful, painstaking spirit, Nellie! Bless his ghostship, we'll hold him in eternal remembrance.'

Nor did his countenance change a feature, even when he and Nellie, and Fred Willard discussed the marvelously obliging kindness of the departed.

Nor did pretty blooming, blushing Mrs. Nellie ever for a moment dream that her visitant was Fred himself, assisted by a wig and false whiskers, nor was there any need she should know, for her happiness was secured, her conscience at ease.

A Nobby Little Couple.

Two of the smallest children in the world for their ages, which are twelve years, and twelve years and two months, respectively, were introduced to the faculty and students of Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, recently. Senorita Lucia Zaranto, a sprightly brunette, is a fraction under twenty inches high, and weighs five pounds in her new elegant street costume, which includes complete female garb, from a bonnet down to the modern gaiter, the latter being less than three inches long. It was explained that she was born at San Carlos, near the city of Vera Cruz, Mexico, her parents were both large and healthy persons. She talks spanish fluently, and understands a smattering of the English tongue. Gen Mito was twelve years old on the 6th of October. He was born at Green, Cuenango county, New York, his parents bearing the name of Flinn, the father, who accompanied the diminutive, weighing 171 pounds, and the mother 135 pounds. At his birth the General weighed 2½ pounds. His advoirdupois now is 9 pounds; height 22 inches. He is a blonde. The General wore a full ball-room costume, consisting of black coat and pantaloons, white vest and white necktie. During his visit to the college the little fellow talked fluently, and was quite active and, when not treading on the trail of her ladyship's dress was busily engaged in casting affectionate glances at her. In presenting the liliputians to the admiring assemblage, Professor Gotchell said he had brought the couple there to introduce them to the Philadelphia Museum, at Ninth and Arch Streets, as something wonderful even at this wonderful age. He explained that he had made a careful examination of the subjects and found them intelligent, healthy and perfectly formed. The heart of either, said he, is not larger than an ordinary sized hickory nut, and the liver in equal proportions; and yet they perform their functions regularly and perfectly as those of fully developed men and women. Their brains, he added, correspond with the size of their bodies, and their intelligence surpasses their size. At the conclusion of the Professor's remarks the General shook hands all around, and the pert Miss bowed and threw kisses at the gallants with whom she had been coquetting.

SEED POTATOES.—Farmers should have an eye to their seed potatoes for planting next Spring. The experience of thousands of farmers in various sections of the country goes to show that large potatoes for seed are no better than medium size ones only that in dry season, if planted whole, they sustain the plants by the moisture in them better than smaller potatoes. It is not advisable to plant the very small ones; they should be fed out, but select those for seed that are rather too small for marketing. But in a rich soil, and in a sufficiently moist season, potatoes no larger than a walnut will produce good crops. Some years ago I planted some potatoes, a new and dear variety, no larger than filberts, and the product was as good as when I used large seed; but the ground was heavily manured, and the season was favorable—When one buys any of the new varieties, and desires to produce the largest possible crop, each potato may be cut into as many pieces as it has eyes, and one eye may be put in a hill. Two or three hundred pounds of potatoes may thus be grown from one pound of seed.

THE result of the Presidential election is the same as if the President of the Senate had counted the returns in the old, old way, ever since the days of Washington. The Electoral Commission but followed what was heretofore considered the Constitutional way of disposing the questions submitted to it. It made no new decision; it simply reaffirmed the uniform practice of the Government in accordance with the honest construction of all the commentators on the Constitution.
