VEGETINE

PURIFIES THE BLOOD, RENOVATES & INVIGORATES THE WHOLE SYSTEM.

Its Medical Properties are Alterative, Tonic, Solvent and Diuretic

VEGETINE is made eXclusively from the juices of carefully selected barks, roots and herbs, and so strongly concentrated, that it will effectually eradicate from the system every taint of Scrofula, Scrofulous Humor, Tumors, Cancer, Cancerous Humor, Erysipelas, Salt Rheum, Syphilitic Diseases, Canker, Faintness at the Stomach, and all diseases that arise from impure blood, Sciatica, Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Gout and Spinal Complaints, can only be effectually cured through the blood.

For Ulcers and Eruptive Diseases of the Skin, Pustules, Pimples, Blotches, Boils, Tetter, Scald-head and Ringworm, VEGETINE has never failed to effect a permanent cure.

For Pains in the Back, Kidney Complaints, Dropsy, Female Weakness, Leucorrhœa, arising from internal ulceration and uterine diseases and General Debility, VEGETINE acts directly upon the causes of these complaints. It invigorates and strengthens the whole system, acts upon the secretive organs, allays inflammation, cures ulceration and regulates the bowels.

For Catarrh, Dyspepsia, Habitual Costiveness, Palpitation of the Heart, Headache, Piles, Nervousness and General Prostration of the Nervous System, no medicine has given such perfect satisfaction as the VEGETINE. It purifies the blood, cleanses all of the organs, and possesses a controlling power over the nervous system.

The remarkable cures effected by VEGETINE have induced many physicians and apothecaries whom we know to prescribe and use it in their own families.

In fact, VEGETINE is the best remedy yet discovered for the above diseases, and is the only reliable BLOOD PURIFIER yet placed before the public.

THE BEST EVIDENCE.

The following letter from Rev. E. S. Best, Pastor of M. E. church, Natick, Mass., will be read with interest by many physicians. Also, those suffering from the same disease as afflicted the son of the Rev. E. S. Best. No person can doubt this testimony, as there is no doubt about the curative powers of VEGETINE:

NATICK, Mass., Jan. 1, 1877.

Mr. H. R. STEVENS: Dear Sir—We have good reason for regarding your VEGETINE a medicine of the greatest value. We feel assured that it has been the means of saving our son's life. He is now seven years of age, for the last two years he has suffered from necrosis of his leg, caused by scrofulous affection and was so far reduced that nearly all who saw him thought his recovery impossible. A council of able physicians could give us but the faintest hope of his ever rallying, two of the number declaring that he was beyond the reach of human remedies, that even amputation could not save him, as he had not vigor enough to endure the operation. Just then we commenced giving him VEGETINE, and from that time to the present he has been continously improving. He has lately resumed his studies, thrown away his crutches and cane, and walks about cheerfully and strong.

Though there is still some discharge from the spot where the limb was fractured, we have the fullest confidence that in a little time he will be perfectly cured.

He has taken about three dozen bottles of VEGETINE, but lately does but little, as he declares that he is too well to be taking medicine.

Respectfully yours, E. S. BEST.
Mrs. L. C. F. BEST.

ALL DISEASES OF THE BLOOD.

If VEGETINE will relieve pain, cleanse, purify and cure such diseases, restoring the patient to perfect health after trying different physicians, many remedies, suffering for years, is it not conclusive proof, if you are a sufferer, you can be cured? Why is this medicine performing such great cures? It works in the blood, in the circulating fluid. It can truly be called the Great Blood Purifier. The great source of disease originates in the blood, and no medicine that do not act directly upon it, to purify and renovate, has any just claim upon the public attention.

Recommend it Heartily.

SOUTH BOSTON, Feb. 7, 1870.

Mr. STEVENS: Dear Sir—I have taken several bottle of your Vegetine and am convinced it is a valuable remedy for Dyspepsia, Kidney Complaint, and general debility of the system.

I can heartily recommend it to all suffering from the above complaints. Yours respectfully.
MRS. MONROE PARKER,

Poetry.

Leaving the Homestead.

You're going to leave the homestead, John,
You're twenty-one to-day,
And the old man will be sorry, John,
To see you go away.
You've labored late and early, John,
And done the best you could;
I ain't a going to stop you, John,
I wouldn't if I could.

Yet something of your feelings, John,
I s'pose I'd ought to know,
Though many a day has passed away—
'Twas forty years ago—
When hope was high within me, John,
And life lay all before,
That I, with strong and measured stroke,
"Cut loose" and pulled from shore.

The years, they come and go, my boy,
The years, they come and go;
And reason locks and rosy brown
Grow white as driven snow.
My life has known its sorrows, John,
Its trials and troubles sore;
Yet God—(that has blessed me, John,
"In basket and in store."

But one thing let me tell you, John,
Before you make your start,
There's more in being honest, John,
Twice over than being smart.
Though rogues may seem to flourish, John,
And sterling worth to fall,
Oh! keep in view the good and true;
'Twill in the end prevail.

Don't think to much of money, John,
And dig and delve and plan,
And rake and scrape in every shape,
To hoard an all you can.
Though gold may count all their riches, John,
In shillings, pounds and pence,
The best of wealth is youth and health,
And good sound, common sense.

And don't be mean or stingy, John,
But lay a little by
Of what you earn: you soon will learn
How fast 'twill multiply.
So when old age comes creeping on,
You'll have a good, stiff
Of wealth to furnish all your needs—
And may be something more.

There's shorter cuts to fortune, John,
We see them every day.
But those who save their self-respect
Climb up the good old way.
All is not gold that glitters, John,
And makes the vulgar stare,
And those we deem the richest, John,
Have oft' the least to spare.

Don't meddle with your neighbors, John,
Their sorrows or their cares:
You'll find enough to do, my boy,
To mind your own affairs.
The world is full of ill-tongues—
You can afford to shirk;
There's lots of people ready, John,
To do such dirty work.

And if amid the race for fame
You win a shining prize
The humbler worth of honest men
You never should despise;
For each one has his mission, John,
In life's unchanging plan—
Though lowly be his station, John,
He is no less a man.

Be good, be pure, be noble, John;
Be honest, brave, be true;
And do to others as ye would
That they should do to you;
And place your trust in God, my boy.
Though fierce fiery ills may be hurled—
Then you can smile at Satan's rage,
And face a frowning world."

Good-by! May Heaven guard and bless
Your footsteps day by day;
The old house will be lonesome, John,
When you are gone away.
The brick that stood upon the hearth
Will have a sadder tone;
The old familiar spots will be
So lonely when you're gone.

Select Tale.

The Fisherman's Wife.

Result of a Heartless Landlord's Exaction.

On a winter's evening toward the end of February, some years ago, a man and a woman were sitting, sadly enough, in one of the humblest dwellings near the harbor of Ostend, beside a table. It was supper time, and yet the table was bare, and there was no fire on the hearth. A new born infant lay shivering in its cradle, which a piece of sailcloth alone protected from the sharp, north wind that blew through a broken pane in the window.

The man, who was one of those beings condemned to poverty and perpetual toil from their very birth, whether they plow the ocean or the earth—one of those unfortunates who never rest nor take to their bed, as Montague says, but to die—or in other words, a seaman—would rise from his seat every now and then, go to the window to examine the state of the weather, and then return to his place as if in dispair.

The woman, who was young and pretty still, in spite of the withering effects of poverty, looked anxiously from her husband to her infant. She endeavored to smile to conceal her sufferings, and to inspire a degree of hope which she felt not.

"I must be off, after all," said the poor seaman; 'though the wind doesn't change, and it blows hard enough to capsize a flagship.'

'You had better wait a bit,' urged the wife.

"But you haven't a crust of bread to eat,' he returned.

"I am not hungry,' answered she as boldly as she could.

'But then there's our infant.'

'Oh, he will not feel want, though we might.' replied the poor mother.

At that moment a loud knock was heard at the door.

'Who's there?' said the wife, starting

The infant was roused out of its sleep, and expressed its hunger by a low wail.

'It must be our landlord,' answer the husband; 'it is only a master who would knock in that fashion. He has come to remind us that our rent will be due in three days.

And the seaman went and opened the door,

Sure enough it was the landlord—a landlord cut upon a pattern unhappily far too common—one of those modern feudal lords, who have replaced the feudality of the sword by the feudality of money, and who are quite as pitiless towards their serfs.

'Hallos, there!' said he 'I've come to see whether you are going to pay me a little more exactly than usual.

'Alas! sir said the young mother, 'we have neither money nor work You see what weather it is!'

'That's no business of mine,' retorted the landlord.

'But, sir,' said the seaman, timidly, 'give us a week's delay, that I may have time to go a-fishing. I should have set off three days ago, but the sea has been too rough.'

'I can't help that,' replied the immovable landlord. Then, seeing the wife cry, he condescended to explain his reasons for being thus inflexible:

'You should not have waited till the foul weather came on. You should work in the right season, and lay by, in the course of the year, a sufficient sum to pay me.'

"But, sir,' said the tenant, 'you know we work as hard as ever we can, and live from hand to mouth; and the week's earnings are swallowed up in downright necessaries.'

'Be that as it may, I must have my money, or I shall give you warning.'

And he walked off in a passion, calling the poor people good for nothing drunkards and idlers. And forthwith he went to calm his rage by drinking a few glasses of liquor at the nearest cafe.

It would be impossible to describe the scene of despair that took place in the seaman's dwelling.

The poor man rose, and embracing his wife and baby, left the cottage, and having knocked at the door of several neighbors he had soon recruited half-a-dozen determined fellows as poor as himself, who were half surprised at his boldness, yet willing to follow his example, however fraught with danger, provided it offered a single chance of success against twenty chances of death.

They now embark in one of those little nutshells called fishing boats, hired for the purpose, and about as ill put together as their house, and letting in as much water as the latter let in wind; and off they set impelled by that heroic sense of duty and of the sacredness of a debt, which must surprise many a banker who has failed, but which induces these poor people to risk for others the dangers they would not have faced for their own profit.

The poor woman had likewise left the cottage, and watched the few planks that were holding her whole happiness.

The boat was soon out at sea. It was just at the moment and in the season of those fearful equinoctial tides, when the sea seems to threaten to swallow up the earth. The waves were tossing about as if in fury, and dashing against each other like the onset of two contending armies.

But no sooner did they feel the boat within their grasp than they assailed it stem and stern, and lashed it sides till its keel began to shake and its ribs to creak. Then down came the wind as if to help the waves, and snapped the mast and tore away the sail.

It was a moving sight to watch this warfare of the elements against man, but which was fortunately half concealed from the seaman's wife by a mountain of thick waves, which only allowed her to surmise the danger to which the craft was exposed.

And now the sea rose higher and higher, and kept surging round the vessel. The waves rose above the sides of the boat and showered down their foam that was caught midway by the gusts of wind, till at length a billow, taller and blacker than all the others, overspread the deck like a black pall, and the death cry of six men was heard amid the triumphant din chorused by the waves and the winds.

Then, by one of those strange effects of chance, the waves seemed to grow appeased by this human sacrifice. The wind fell and in a short time the sea became as smooth and polished as a sheet of silver.

The seaman's wife had remained on shore until she had lost sight of the vessel, and then returned home, little thinking that the boat had been upset so short a time after. On the contrary her heart felt lightened at the sight of the stars now peeping forth from the sky, and she waited more hopefully for her husband's return.

The landlord waited also.

A week after a bill was stuck up on the house near the harbor, bearing the words. "Te huuren terstond" (To be let with immediate possession). A lifeless infant, wrapped in a towel, lay exposed near the door amid a small lot of furniture for sale tenant's death not having discharged the debt; while a mad-woman sat on the jetty, at the very spot where the seaman's wife had seen the vessel for the last time.

And every day at the same hour, this poor desolate creature would come and take her seat at the same place, in spite of the rain or the cutting winds that blew in her face, with her head bare, and her eyes fixed on the horizon, scanning each billow that rolled toward the shore, as though it would bring her the beloved object that was missing.

Then, as soon as the weather brightened up, she would return to her lonely home; for the cottage, by a just feeling of revenge on the part of the people, had never been hired by a new tenant. She therefore went into it prepared for her husband's return.

She would lay on the table the bread received from her neighbors' charity, and serve up the soup for him who has never more to tea, while she kept waiting constantly for him who would never return again.

At other times when this modern Nina happened to descry a vessel, and she stood watching on the shore, would she brighten up, and seem to be busily searching for her husband among the crew; she would then wave her handkerchief, shout aloud, and run after the vessel till it put into the harbor. There she would look out for her missing one, and pitch on one of the crew whom she mistook for him, and take him home with her.

It would be impossible to describe the extreme respect of these poor seamen for the unhappy madwomen, and the religious complaisance with which they fostered her illusion, by going to supper with her, and paying for their meal.

The police, however, thought it so highly immoral that the poor woman should choose a living husband every day to represent the dead one, that orders were given to put her into confinement. She was near dying of a burning feaver in her prison.

Some time after she was set at liberty, and the first use she made of it was to go and take her usual seat on the jetty, and to gaze at the ocean.

It was evening; the sea was rough and the clouds as threatning as on the fatal day that made her a widow. Presently she espied a vessel at anchor in the same direction in which she had ceased to see the boat that formerly bore her husband; then the hallucination she always experienced at such a sight seized upon her more violently than ever; while the similarity of the weather still further aggravated her chronic illusion.

Her eyes became dilated, her lips were parted and her arms extended; but as the vessel rode at anchor, and did not approach a nervous crisis shook her whole frame.

She thought she heard a voice calling to her, and saw a phantom hold out his arms to her; she screamed aloud, rushed into the sea, and hurried toward the vessel.

It was late, the night was dark, the weather tempestuous, and the shore deserted. On she went, without let or hindrance, and walked and walked into the waves, until she disappeared!

The madwoman's house may still be seen at Ostend, near the Hotel des Bains. The waiters of the hotel often point it out to travelers. It is still to let.

NOTES AND QUERIES.—By the accompanying table of letters you have a "key to a person's name." The name of a person or any word may be found out in the following manner:

A	B	D	H	P
C	C	E	I	Q
E	F	F	J	R
G	G	G	K	S
I	J	L	L	T
K	K	M	M	U
M	N	N	N	V
O	O	O	O	W
Q	R	T	X	X
S	S	U	Y	Y
U	V	V	Z	Z
W	W	W
Y	Z

Let the person whose name you wish to know inform you in which of the upright columns the first letter of his name is contained. If it be found in but one column, it is the top letter; if it occurs in more than one column, it is found by adding the alphabetical number of the letters of these columns, and the sum will be the number of the letter sought. By taking one letter at a time in this way, the whole name can be ascertained. For example, take the word "Jane." J is found in the two columns commencing with B and H, which are the second and eigth letters down the alphabet; the sum is ten, and the tenth letter down the alphabet is J; the letter sought. The next letter, A, appears in but one column, where it stands at the top. N is seen in the columns headed B, D and H; these are the second, fourth and eighth letters of the alphabet, which, added, give the fourteenth or N, and so on. The use of this table will excite no little curiosity among those unacquainted with the foregoing explanations.

Two Baltimore men bet $1,000 on the result of the Presidential election, and, being unable to amicably agree which had won, the case was taken into a court. Then the District Attorney, under a law similar to one in force in New York State, took possession of the stakes and turned the money over to the city treasury.

The General of the Army is W. T. Sherman; the Lieutenant-General, P. H. Sheridan; the Major-Generals, are Hancock, Schofield, and McDowell; the Brigadier-Generals, Pope, Howard, Terry, Ord, Auger, and Crook; and Adjutant-General, with the rank of Brigadier General, is E. D. Townsend.

An Irish hod-carrier at work on a building, was complaining of his hard lot; said he: "If I thought I'd have to carry a hod in heaven, I'd tie a big stone round my neck and jump into the middle of the sea, and stay there as long as I lived."
