Poetry.

"Come Unto Me."

Come unto Me, ye heavy laden,
And I will give you rest;
Come unto Me, ye perishing
Reclineupon My breast;
Come unto Me, ye tempted,
I'll shield you with my arm,
I'll lead you all the thorny way,
And keep you safe from harm.

Come unto Me, ye hungry,
Who linger by the way,
My fields are wide, I've bread to spare,
Come take it while ye may,
Come unto Me, ye thirsty,
Who tread the desert sands,
Why perish ye? I've cool, deep wells
All through My fertile lands.

Come unto Me, ye mourners sad,
And lay your burden down;
I'll help you bear the heavy cross,
And give you a golden crown.
Come unto Me, ye suffering,
Your wounded hearts I'll heal;
With tender care I'll watch you through—
For sufferers I feel,

Come unto Me, ye wayward ones
In flowery paths of sin;
Forsake the ways we love so well,
For danger lurks therein;
Your lives were Mine, so held them back,
But your sins I will forgive
If you'll bring to Me, the remnant left—
Come unto Me and live.

Come, every nation, kindred, tongue—
Come Gentile, and come Jew—
There's room in Heaven for every one,
For I have died for you:
I hung upon the cruel cross
My Father's hand to stay;
I saw you ruined, lost, undone—
There was no other way.

Your souls are Mine, I purchased them
In agony and blood:
I'll wash them white as driven snow
In Jordan's cleansing flood,
Come unto Me—why will ye die?
Your sins I will forgive;
I'll fold you to my wounded breast—
Come unto Me, and live.

Miscellaneous.

How She April Fooled Him.

John Sanscript's wife went to bed Saturday night with her mind made up to fool the old man the next day or die in the attempt. In previous years she had found John impervious to jokes of all kinds, and she realized the Augean task before her on the morrow. With her mind full of her self-imposed task she went to sleep. At daylight she awoke and at once began to operate. Her victim was lying with his back toward her, apparently in a sound sleep. She poked him vigorously in the ribs with her sharp elbow and clawed his shins with her sharp toe nails, preparatory to startling him with a half-whispered warning.

"John—oh, John—there's some one ringing the door-bell!"

"Lem 'im ring," was the sleepy response.

"But, John, maybe it's the man on the next square, who owes you that $100, come to pay you."

"No 'taint, neither," said John, with a yawn.

"But you don't know, and it may be that very man."

"I guess not, for he's buried; died last week. Besides, old woman, your ears deceive you. I took the bell knob off last night to fool April foolers."

Heavens, what a mess she made of it to begin with! But when the old man rolled out of bed, yawned, and picked up his pants, she rammed the sheet in her mouth to plug up her laughter."

"Oh, jiminy, wont he tumble when he puts his foot in them pants and finds the legs sewed up," she said to herself.

Judge of her rage when the provoking brute innocently carried the blockaded breeches to the wardrobe and inquired:

"Nancy, where's them chocolate colored pants I had on last week?"

"Put on the ones you have in your hands, John; what's the matter with them?"

"I burst a button off yesterday, and they need mending in the seat."

At breakfast she poured out a nice cup of coffee for him, and sweetened it with two spoonsful of salt.

"You needn't give me any coffee," he said; "keep that yourself."

"Why, John, what's the matter? This is the first time since we were married you refused coffee."

"The blamed stuff has made me nervous, lately; and as this is the first of the month, I thought I'd break off and only drink it for supper. You keep that yourself."

When he came home to dinner she had prepared him a neatly directed envelope with a sheet of blank paper inclosed within. He eyed it suspiciously, and throwing it into the fire, said:

"I know that handwriting; it's from that crazy lunatic who wants me to vote for him to-morrow. So much for his letter."

In the evening she disguised herself in one of her husband's old suits, and came to the door to beg for charity.

"Please give me a nickel to buy some bread?"

"Get out, or I'll give you a nickel with my boot."

"But, sir, consider; I'm starving."

"The devil you are! Now, I'll bet you $50 against the suit of clothes you wear that you are an imposter."

"But, sir"—

"If I were to search you now I shouldn't be surprised to find you lousy with wealth. For two cents I would see."

"For heaven's sake"—

"Now, none of your soft-soap on me. I don't believe in beggars. Here, you policeman, take this infernal imposter to the station-house."

Just as the "peeler" grabbed the supposed beggar by the back of the neck, a shrill voice yelled:

"John! John! you wouldn't send you?"

"The deuce I wouldn't," was the cool response. "Anybody who lies to me about my door-bell, sews up my trousers, puts salt in my coffee, writes me anonymous notes and steals my clothes, ought to go to the penitentiary for life."

"But how did you know—"

"If you women wouldn't talk in your sleep you might keep a secret once in a while."

Mrs. Sanscript says that hereafter when she attempts an April-fool joke she will sit up all the night previous.—Cincinnati Inquirer.

Live Snake in a Boy's Stomach.

The Dubuque Herald relates a wonderful and almost incredible story of a snake which was imprisoned in the stomach of a lad for a period of five years. The boy, whose name is Benning, resides with his parents near Dyerville, in Delaware county, Ia.—Five years ago, he began to suffer from pains in his stomach and abdominal regions, which at times were almost beyond endurance. The best physicians within reaching distance were consulted, but all in vain. As the lad grew older the pains became less frequent, but when they did occur they were of such an excruciating nature as to throw him into terrible convulsions. Just before the pains and fits came on young Benning would declare that he felt something crawling in his body and winding and twisting about his intestines. The boy ate voraciously, but remained poor and emaciated. Several physicians believed him to be troubled with tapeworm and treated him for that affliction, but without favorable results. Benning's parents recently sought the advice of a doctor who happened to visit Dyerville for the purpose of lecturing. This physicians made an examination of the patient, and stated that the boy's stomach was inhabited by a living reptile of some sort. He administered a dose of medicine, and expressed the belief that it would so operate as to make its appearance in the boy's throat. The doctor proved to be correct. In a few minutes after administering the medicine the head of a snake appeared in the boy's mouth and was gently drawn forth from its five years' imprisonment by a forceps in the hands of the doctor. The snake was of the garter species, beautifully striped, and measures 16 inches in length. The snake died soon after leaving its prison and is now preserved in alcohol. The Herald says that it has been seen by hundreds of people, and that the event created considerable excitement. The theory given for the presence of the snake in Benning's stomach is that he must have swallowed it while drinking from some of the springs in the vicinity of his residence, or else drank the germ from which his snake ship grew into his formidable size.—The story is a remarkable one and well calculated to excite wide-spread attention.

Horrible Situation.

Ladies intending to make a long journey by rail without an escort would better read this and stay at home: "Mrs. Florence Watson, a richly dressed Ohio lady, took the cars at Chicago last Thursday for Iowa City, where she intended to visit her husband's relatives. A man took the opposite seat and looked at her intently. After a while he left the seat and another man took his place, and subsequently four men sat there in turn, each watching her closely. It was now dusk. The six men, after holding a consultation with the conductor entered the car together and announced that she was a crazy woman and the wife of one of them; hence the passengers would understand why she had been watched by them. In vain did she protest that it was a lie. Nobody believed her. At Rock Island her captors endeavored to put her off the train, saying that she must change cars for Iowa City, but she clung desperately to the seat. The passengers shrank nervously from her, and she was completely in the power of six desperadoes. As the train drew near Durant she recognized her brother-in-law upon the platform. He was waiting to meet her in accordance with a dispatch which she had sent from Chicago. She shouted to him, but her captors gagged her, and in a moment the train was in motion. At Wilton, where she had to change cars, she attempted to escape, but was surrounded by her persecutors and forced to take refuge in a baggage car, after she had sprained her ankle. At Iowa City she made a frantic appeal to the conductor to take her to the leading hotel, where the landlord's wife would vouch for sanity. The conductor assented, and the unhappy woman was identified and rescued. The strain had been too great; she fainted. When the conductor returned to the train the six ruffins had disappeared. The passengers, when they heard the conductor's account, admitted that they had acted like fools in allowing half a dozen rascals to swear away a woman's sanity. It is believed the object of the outrage was theft or possible abduction with the intention of retaining her as a hostage with the hope of a large ransom. The appearance of the lady suggest-

The History of a Law Suit Involving Part of the City of New Orleans.

A dispatch from New Orleans announces that Judge Billings, of the United States district court at that place had rendered a decision in the case of Mrs. Myra Clarke Gaines, who claims several million dollars' worth of property in that city, in favor of the claimant. This is a phase of one of the longest and most interesting law suits in the annals of American jurisprudence. The history of the case is briefly as follows: Mrs Gaines is the widow of General Edmond Pendleton Gaines, and was born in the county of Sligo, Ireland, in 1795, and, emigrating to New Orleans, inherited a considerable property from his uncle in 1799. Before the acquisition of Louisiana he was American consul there, and represented the territory in congress in 1806. In August, 1811, Daniel Clark died, and his property was disposed of under a will dated May 20th, 1811, which gave the bulk of his estate to his mother, Mary Clarke, who was then living in Germantown, Pa. He was also supposed to be a bachelor, but was known to have a liaison with with a beautiful young Creole, Zulime des Granges. Two daughters were born of this connection, one at Philadelphia in April, 1802, and the other, Myra, at New Orleans, in 1805. The latter was taken to the house of Col. Davis, a friend of Clarke's nursed by Mrs Harper, and grew up in Philadelphia, where she was known as Myra Davis. In 1830 Mr. Davis, being then a member of the Pennsylvania legislature, sent home for certain papers, and, in searching for these, Myra discovered some letters which partially revealed the secret of her birth, and laid the foundation of the law suit which has since become famous.

In 1832 she married W. W. Whitney, of New York, who, in following up the discovery made by his wife, secured from Col. Davis an old letter which gave an account of a will made by Clark in 1813, just before his death, giving all of his large estate to Myra, and acknowledging her as his legitimate daughter. Mr. and Mrs. Whitney went immediately to Cuba, and there, after a long search, discovered the writer of the letter, and, with the aid of evidence given by him began suit in New Orleans for the property of Daniel Clark, which had in the meantime become immensely valuable and included a great part of the present business quarter of the city. On the trial of this suit the Mrs. Harper above mentioned testified that four weeks before his death Clark showed her the will he had made in favor of Myra, and acknowledged the child's legitimacy. Baron de Boistontine testified that Clark had made the same statements to him. On this and other corroborative evidence the lost will was received by the supreme court of Louisiana on February 18, 1855, as the last will and testament of Daniel Clark, though the document itself could not be found. The objection was then interposed that by the laws of Louisiana a testator could not make devises to his adulterine bastard. On this point, however, two sisters of Mary's mother testified that Zulime des Granges was privately married to Clark in their presence in Philadelphia in 1803 by a Catholic priest, it having been learned that Zulime's reputed husband, Des Granges, had another wife living, and was therefore not legally married. In another suit growing out of this difficulty the United States supreme court decided that the marriage and legitimacy of Myra was established.

In the meantime Mr. Whitney died, and his widow married General Gaines, whom she has also outlived. Assisted by the general, Mrs. Gaines continued her litigation, and, in 1856 in the supreme court of the United States filed a bill in equity to recover valuable real estate, then in the possession of the City of New Orleans, and a decision in her favor was rendered in 1867. The value of the property claimed was estimated in 1861, at 35,000,000, of which Mrs. Gaines had up to 1874 obtained possession of some $9,000,000. Numerous actions of ejectment against individual parties have followed, and it is no doubt one of these that Judge Billings has now decided in Mrs. Gaines's favor.

The heroine of this romantic story is a little black eyed lady of over seventy, who still retains traces of former uncommon beauty. She is well educated, quick and courageous. Her long and varied experience in the law courts has given her a legal education of no mean character. On several occasions, and notably in the supreme court of the United States in 1861, she has pleaded her own cause personally and with remarkable success. Though at the time of General Gaines's death, a wealthy woman, she has often been in financial straits, for she has spent several large fortunes in prosecuting her claims. The writer has often seen her, as recently as 1871, walking the streets of New Orleans in the plainest clothes, and with her inevitable little black bag on her arm, looking far more like a cook in search of a place than like the heiress to $35,000,000. The property now known as the Houmas Plantations and belonging to Mr. John Burnside, of New Orleans, was at one time part of the Gaines estate and was sold, with the slaves on it, to General Wade Hampton, of South Carolina, in 1812, for $500,000. When Mrs. Gaines succeeds in getting possession of all the property awarded her, she will be the wealthiest person in New Orleans, and perhaps the richest woman in the world.—N. Y. World.

VEGETINE

He Says It Is True.

SENECA FALLS, Nov. 9, 1876.

MR. H. R. STEVENS:

Dear Sir—As you are an entire stranger to me, I want you to know what VEGETINE has done for me. Only those have been raised from death's door can know the value of such a good medicine. I am 58 years of age. Three years ago I was taken sick with what the doctors called LUMBAGO. For weeks I was confined to my bed. I had three different physicians, without any help. I received no relief. I was a great sufferer; finally I became entirely helpless. The last doctor told me there was no help for me but he might possibly save my life by ejecting morphine in my arms and legs. The encouragement for saving my life by having this done was so small a chance I could not consent to run the risk. About this time my son read your advertisement in our paper, a testimony of a person who had been very sick with about the same complaint. He was so confident VEGETINE would cure me, that he went right away to the apothecary store and bought a bottle of VEGETINE. Before I had used the first bottle I found great relief; I could move myself in bed. After taking three bottles I was able to sit up and move about my room. I continued taking the Vegetine, and I was in a few weeks restored to my former health. The VEGETINE saved my life after the physicians said there was no help for me. I have had no doctor since. I feel well; take a dose of VEGETINE and recommend it to any friends.

Your Vegetine ought to be in every family. My doctor was surprised to see me in good health. He says VEGETINE is a good medicine. I tell him it cured me. He says, "It is true." I cannot feel too thankful.

Very gratefully yours,
MRS. CATHERINE COONS.
Seneca Falls, Seneca County, N. Y.

VEGETINE.

ALL DISEASES OF THE BLOOD. If VEGETINE will relieve pain, cleanse purify and cure such diseases restoring the patient to perfect health after trying different physicians, many remedies, suffering for years, is not conclusive proof, if you are a sufferer, you can be cured! Why is this medicine performing such great cures? It works in the blood, in the circulating fluid. It can truly be called the GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER. The great source of disease originates in the blood; and no medicine that does not act directly upon it, to purify and renovate, has any just claim upon public attention.

VEGETINE.

WILL CURE.

CANKER HUMOR.

ROCKPORT, March 31, 1876.

H. R. STEVENS:

Sir.—Last fall my husband got me two bottles of your Vegetine to take for the Canker Humor, which I have had in my stomach for several years. I took it and the result was very satisfactory. I have taken a good many remedies for the Canker Humor, and none seemed to help me but Vegetine. There is no doubt in my mind that every one suffering with Canker Humor can be cured by taking Vegetine. It gave me a good appetite, and I felt better in every respect.

Yours, with respect,
MRS. LYDIA ANN POOLE.

VEGETINE.

NOTHING EQUAL TO IT.

SOUTH SALEM, MASS., Nov. 10, 1875.

MR. H. R. STEVENS:

Dear Sir—I have been troubled with Scrofula, Canker and Liver Complaint for three years. Nothing ever did me any good until I commenced using the VEGETINE. I am now getting along fast rate, and still using it. I feel it is my duty to say that VEGETINE is the best thing I ever took for scrofula or blood disease. Can heartily recommend it to everybody.

Yours truly, MRS. LOUISA M. PACE and NO. 10 LOGANSPORT, South Salem, Mass.

VEGETINE promptly eradicates every kind of humor, and restores the entire system to a healthy condition.
