That day was a very pleasant one; so I asked the little girl to take a walk to sculptor's room near by. Here were a great many blocks of marble, Marble, you know, is a vehand stone, often white. A sculptor is one who carves beautiful images out of it. So Annie and I watched him with great interest. At last I pointed to a piece of marble rather dark and rough. 'Do you like the looks of that !' said I to her.

ber was measured. His master would send to the poet office, simply saying to him, "go up—get letters;" the dog would go to the postoffice and go around to one of fliction of pain, which really gratified them. go to the postoffice and go around to one of the clerks, look at him, wag his tail, and so well known the clerk would give him the letters, which he would carry back to his master, and in the same way would carry letters which his master had written to the office to be mailed. His soont was very soute.

Coming home from the woods one day, Blewart was met on the road by a company of young people, who had been at a pionic, about a half mile away. One of the young ladies had left her parasol on the ground. Stewart called his dog, and pointing to the path said, "go find and pointing to the path said, "go find and prisonment."

In the citers, which he would carry back to his master, and in the same way would carry letters which his master had written to the office to be sue they become utter sneaks. Talk of the sneaking developed by watchfalaces; more boys are made sneaks nowadays, that is cowards and liars together, by tyranny and bullying, by the effect to escape blows or avoid persecution, then by all the eyec of all the masters and ushers in Great Britain. It is not only, we must remember, actual pain they fig from. The old days are over, and the actual amount of a flogging, and if he seats him on the brakes another boy's fauger he is sure of a flogging, and if he seats him on the bars of the grate he risks a period of imprisonment.

The children of this generation have grown imaginative, and fly as one correspondent of the Trmes confesses that he did, from terrors absurdly exaggerated by their own fears, but which nevertheless, do all the injury to their characters that actual dangers would do. In every other department of life we recognize that terror does mischief, and that injustice injures the character of the victim, and yet we half doubt whether boys at school are not made manly by perpetual alarm, and strengthened by the sense that they are powerless against injustice. The slave driver who whips is considered a bruis, but the master who flogs is only a disciplinarian, the mother who governs by whipping is despised, but the manior who beats is an efficient supporter of the authority of the school, Putting down injustice everywhere also, we believe so profess to believe that in a school it "makes men" of its victime, and though convinced that a floating hell' is never a useful shipbelieve that torture may go on in school with benefit to the scholars' capacity for life. The utter absurdity of this belief can be made clear by a single illustration Discipline is absolutely accential to starmy, and the essence of discipline is fear of punishment. Yet to a regiment is which the non-perumissioned effect could ake. They looked under the shanty and done. The Justice at once convicted the is to be hoped that he will fall into good Remarkable Canine Intelligence.

Among the passengers lost on the steamer St. Clair, on Lake Superior, was a man mamed Stewart, of Duluth. He had a small English spaniel, which swamashore. The dog was well known at Duluth and along the northron Pacific railroad, and was remarkable for his intelligence and sagacity. His owner was emplyed by the Northern Pacific road to measure timber delivered by contractors. The dog would take the end of the tape line and go to the end of a log sixty or seventy feet long and hold it at the end while his master would hold it at the other, and do this all day or until all the timber was measured. His master would becoming manly, become, if they have any strength in them, brutal, as violent.
