They have the satisfaction of controlling the most eXtensive and complete advertising connection which has ever been secured, and one which would be hardly possible in any other country but this. They have succeeded in working down a complex business into so thoroughly a systematic method that no change in the newspaper system of America can escape notice, while the widest information upon all topices interesting to advertisers is placed readily at the disposal of the public.—Extract from New York "Times," June 14, 1876.

SIR JOHN FRANKLIN.—The recent discovery of another clue to Franklin's Arctic expedition has revived public interests in his fate, and there is talk of fitting out a party to sail for the Polar Sea to look up his remains and records. Some Esquimaux Indians, it appears, have been found near Hudson's Bay with relics of Franklin's party in their possession who also gave information that the books of the expedition were buried at a place called Englefield, five hundred miles inland from Hudson's Bay. It is assumed that these books contain the journals of the ill-fated explorers, and, if so, it is worth a strenuous effort to secure them. It is stated that Prof. Nourse of the Smithsonian Institute, is interested in the matter, and that he has written to the British government to ascertain if the reward of twenty thousand pounds once offered by Parliament for the restoration of the records still holds good. In case a favorable response is returned, it is proposed to organize an expedition to sail in the spring. The recovery of the relics would certainly be hailed with great satisfaction in this country as well as in England. Their recovery may result in one advantage at least. The recovered journals may prove, by additional testimony, what experience has already shown, that Polar exploration beyond the point where nature appears to have put a perpetual barrier, involves a needless waste of energy, means and life.

Sir John Franklin sailed from England, May 26, 1845, and the expedition was last seen by a whaler in Baffin's Bay on the 26th of July, the same.

——A strange discovery is reported from the lake of Geneva. A tourist having lost his trunk, two divers were employed to search for it. While they where below water they found that they supposed to be a village once covered by the lake. Their statements led to an investigation on the spot by the municipal authorities, who took measures to ascertain the cause of the discovery on account of the divers. On entering the placid surface with oil, these latter were able to distinguish the plan of the town, streets squares, and detached houses making the bed of the lake. The ruddy hue which characterized them led the observers to suppose that the buildings had been covered with a famous vermilion cement which was used by the Celts, Cimbri, and the early Gauls. There are about 200 houses arranged over an oblong surface, near the middle of which is a space more open, supposed to have been used for public assemblages. At the eastern extremity lies a large square tower, which was taken for a rock. A superficial investigation seems to indicate the construction of these buildings dates from some centuries before our era. The council of Vaud has decided to have the site of the dwellings inclosed by a jetty scratching from the land, and to drain off the water, so as to bring to light what promises to be one of the most interesting archæological discoveries of our day.—[London Tele raph.

BRAIN STIMULANT.—The best possible thing for a man to do when he feels too weak to carry any thing is to go to bed and sleep as long as he can. This is the only recuperation of the brain force; because during sleep the brain is in a state of rest, in a condition to receive and appropriate particles of nutriment from the blood, which takes the place of those which have been consumed by previous labor, since the very act of thinking burns up solid particles, as every turn of the wheel or screw of the steamer is the result of consumption by the fire of the fuel in the furnace The supply of consumed brain substance can only be had from the nutritive particles in the blood which were obtained from the food eaten previously, and the brain is so constituted that it can best receive and appropriate to itself those nutritive particles during the state of rest, of quiet, and stillness of sleep. Were stimulants supply nothing in themselves; they goad the brain, and force it to a greater consumption of its substance, until it is so exhausted that there is not power enough left to receive a supply.

The Highest Railroad Bridge in the World.

The Cincinnati papers are giving accounts of the opening of the new Southern railroad from that city to the Kentucky river, where there is said to be the highest railroad bridge yet built It is 275 feet high, having three spans, the middle one 375 feet long, and the others 300 feet each, the total length being 1,125 feet. There is a bridge in Switzerland which is 254 feet high, but with a span only 114 feet long, and one at Varrugas in the Andes, 252 feet high, with spans 125 feet long. The piers of the Kentucky bridge are the largest in the country, excepting those of the New York and Brooklyn bridge, the stonework being 130 by 47 feet, and the base of the iron work 117 by 28. The frame is all wrought iron, and was built out from the abutments toward the centre of each span. The fastening of the junction points was accomplished in a novel way. One sunshiny day having expanded the frame work, the connecting bolts were fastened, and so much secured, then a second day of sunshine having given all the expansion the bridge was capable of, the bolts were made fast permanently. At the opening, the bridge was made subject to seven severe tests, and stood them all.

Messrs. P. & T. Collins, of Philadelphia, have received a contract from Dom Pedro, of Brasil, to build a railroad in that country nearly two hundred miles long. The estimated

A Sharper Outwitted.

A Gentleman was witness, a few days ago, to a sharp trick at cards on a passenger train on one of our Western railroads noted for the favor in which the three card monte men and other card sharps hold it. A well dressed clerical looking man had attracted a crowd of gasping passengers around him by a number of ingenious and skillfully executed tricks with a pack of playing cards, and at last shuffling the cards several times, and slapping them down upon his knee, he said:

"I'll bet any man in the crowd that I can cut the jack of diamonds at the first attempt."

Every one hung back suspiciously, until a green gawky-looking individual, with hay seed in his hair, pushed his way forward. 'Mister,' he questioned, 'may I take a squint at them keerds?' 'Certainly,' said the professional, as he handed them over. The countryman inspected them suspiciously, and then apparently satisfied, he returned them, but did not take the bet. "The cards are all right aren't they?' asked the professional, 'Yes I guess they'd suit me,' the countryman replied, hesitatingly. 'Why don't you take my bet then?'

'Wa'al I don't know; I ain't much of a betting man.'

The professional saw that the countryman was more than half inclined to take him up, and to make sure of his game, he said; Come I'll bet $10 to $5 $15, $20 to $5.'

"I'm darned if I don't take ye,' exclaimed the countryman, after a moment's hesitation and, diving into his pocket he drew out a strip of calico (apparently a sample to show his girl,) some confectionary, a plug of tobacco, several horse shoe nails and, lastly, a dyspeptic looking leather wallet, from which he extracted a greasy five dollar bill which he placed in the hands of a bystander. The stranger speedily covered the deposit with a twenty fresh from Uncle Sam's printing bureau, and then thoroughly shuffling the cards as people do, he grasped the pack in one hand, and producing a sharp pocket knife he actually cut every card to the pack in two. Haven't I cut the jack of diamonds?

"I'll be eternally swallowed if you have,' replied the countryman, producing that veritable card from his coat sleeve, whither he had dexterously conveyed it while pretending to examine the cards. The countryman quietly pocketed the stakes and the professional slunk off into another car.

Christopher Columbus' Bones.

The United States consul at San Domingo has transmitted to the Department of State an account of the recent discovery of the bones of Columbus in the cathedral in that city.

Dying in Spain in 1506, the remains of Columbus were first deposited in the convent of St Francis, in 1513 they were transferred to the Carthusian convent of Las Cuevas, whence they were shipped to Santo Domingo in 1536, and deposited in the cathedral in that city In 1795 these remains, as it was then and up to the present discovery believed, were conveyed in great pump to the cathedral at Havana, where they were supposed to repose ever since.

The consul at San Domingo says that while some workmen were digging up the floor around the pulpit in the cathedral, to make some repairs they exposed to view a walled orifice, containing a leaden case, two feet long by eight inches deep, and eight inches wide, the inscriptions on which bore incontestible evidence that the contents were the bones of Christopher Columbus. Immediately on this discovery being made, the remains were restored to their original resting place, and the receptacle walled up.

On the 10th of September, in the presence of the Governor and other government officials in the various consuls, amid the sounds of martial music and the booming of cannon, the remains were again exhumed, the box, bones and inscription examined, and the facts recorded and attested to by all the officials and consuls present.

The lead box containing the remains was then inclosed in another box, carefully sealed with the seals of the consuls, to be opened only in their presence, and placed in the custody of Padre Bellini, in the church of Regina Anglorum, to be held by him, subject to investigation by any foreign commissions desirous of satisfying themselves of the facts, and until a satiable amount can be raised to erect a fitting monument over the remains.

It being suggested that other countries might like to contribute to the erection of this monument, the various consuls were requested to bring the subject to the attention of their respective governments, in order to give them a chance to do so. The ancient records of the cathedral in San Domingo having been long ago destroyed by vandals, no facts concerning the supposed removal of these remains to Havana can be ascertained in San Domingo; but it is conjectured that the monks palmed off on the Spaniards the remains of somebody else, retaining to themselves and their cathedral the consecrated bones of the great navigator.

A teacher, who, in a fit of vexation, called her pupils a set of young addlers, on being reproved for her language, apologized by saying that she was speaking to those just commencing their arithmetic.

A young man out west while courting his girl put his arm around her waist and lacerated his finger with a pin. He came near dying of lock-jaw. Let this be a sad warning
