

A Boy's Compassion on Babies.

There are four or five different kinds of babies. There is the big baby, the little baby, the white baby and the black baby, and there is the baby of pink.

Most of these babies was born in a boarding house, kept the baby elephant, I think he was born on a railroad train, came his silver carriage his trunk with him.

A white baby is prettier nor a elephant baby, but he can't out so much hay.

All the babies what I have ever seen were born very young, especially the gal babies, and they can't none of them talk the United States language.

My father had—I mean my mother had a baby once. It was an elephant baby; it was a little white baby; it comed one day when there was nobody home; it was a funny looking fellow, just like a lobster.

I asked my father was it a boy or a girl, and he says he don't know whether he was a father or mother. This little baby has got two legs, just like a monkey.

His name is Mariah. He don't look like my mother or father, but he just looks like my Uncle Tom 'cause the little baby ain't got no hair on its head.

One day I asked my Uncle Tom what was the reason he ain't got no hair and the little baby ain't got no hair. He says he don't know, 'cept that the little baby was born so, and he was a married man.

One day I pulled a feather out of the old rooster's tail and stuck it up to the baby's nose and it tickled him so, he almost died. It was only such a little bit of a feather, and I didn't see what he wanted to make such a fuss about it for. My mother said I oughter be ashamed of myself and I didn't get no bread on my butter for no'n a week.

One day the sheriff came in the house for to collect a bill of $9 for crockery. My father says he can't pay the bill, and Sheriff, he says, "then I take something," and he look around the room and he see'd the little baby and, "Ah, ha! I take this," and he picked up the little baby, and he wrapped him up in a newspaper and he take him away to the station house.

Then my mother she commenced to cry, and my father says, "Hush, Mary Ann that was all right. Don't you see how we fooled that fellow? Don't you see the bill crockery was for nine dollars, and the little baby was only worth two and a half."

I think I'd rather be a girl, not a boy, 'cause when a girl gets a whipping she gets it on her fingers, but when a boy gets a licking he gets it all over.

I don't like babies very much any how, 'cause they make so much noise. I never knew but one quiet baby, and he died.

COMPLETION OF THE FAMOUS HOUSSE TUNNEL.—The Houssé Tunnel is now pronounced completed, the east end facade and other recent and important improvements having been finished. The facade at the east end was very much needed from the danger of injury to tracks and the necessity of providing for the passage of trains with safety and regularity, so the engineers were instituted to construct an extension of the tunnel and facade on the same general principles as the facade at the west end. The facade is composed of granite, many of the blocks weighing from four to five tons each, rock face, unadorned and severe, but presenting a massive and substantial structure. The arch extension is about twenty-five feet, and the facade about sixty feet long by forty feet high, rock foundation. By a most admirable system all danger of ruin collision in the tunnel is averted. At present only one track is laid through the bore, and the trains are run by telegraph, passenger trains being allowed ten minutes and freight twenty minutes to pass. The tunnel is never occupied by two trains at the same time, and no train is allowed to enter until the preceding train has made its exit. The roof of the tunnel is considered perfectly safe, not a piece the size of a walnut having been detached for a year, and about a mile and one-third of brick arching having been built to sustain all doubtful localities in sections from ten feet upward. Still, the roof is under constant examination by men on top of an elevated carriage, which is propelled along the road. Admittance to visitors is strictly denied.—Adams (Mass.) Transcript, December 19.

Hazel continued to gain and gain till, after running within a few yards of fifteen miles in 14153 the Italian gave up. Hazel at the time having gone close upon seventeen and a half miles, and as there had been some betting that he would run his thirty miles in three and a quarter hours, it was thought that he would have finished the distance; but after running twenty miles in the way he ran most times of 15727, Hazel stopped, of course receiving the stakes.

A Michigan widow recently hid her cow away under the bed to save it from the tax collector. This may be called a genuine case of "cow-hiding by a female."

The fact that this tin suspender button in a church contribution box on foreign missions can on a square issue, outvote the nickles two to one, is not to be taken as an indication of a return to specie payments.
