Farm, Home, &c.

Polish for Old Furniture.—Take of 98 per cent. alcohol, one half pint; pulverized resin and gum shellac, of each one-fourth ounce, let this cut in the alcohol; then add linseed oil one-half pint, and shake well.

A good way to keep butter sweet is to prepare it in rolls from half a pound to two pounds, put a clean cloth around each, place them in jars, making a brine with salt and a little saltpetre, not very strong. Place weight enough on it to keep it under the brine, cover with a cloth, and put a lid on the jar.

To Drive Off Red Ants—Grease a plate with lard and set it where the ants are troublesome; place a few sticks around the plate for the ants to climb upon; they will desert the sugar bowl for the lard; occasionally turn the plate over the fire where there is no smoke, and the ants will drop into it: reset the plate, and in a few repetitions you will catch all the ants; they will trouble nothing else while the lard is accessible. Also a good way is to sprinkle powdered borax over the shelves and blow it into their haunts. Borax is clean, and not at all injurious should it happen to get on food.

Straightening up crooked Trees.—Often in a fine orchard we find one or more trees leaning over so far as to destroy the beauty of the whole orchard. It is also more difficult to cultivate around a leaning tree. This trouble may easily be remedied while the trees are young by partly digging up and replanting them. The roots will be found smallest on the side from which the tree leans, therefore these roots should be loosened from the earth and the tree set in a perpendicular position and carefully fastened by stakes and guys and the earth replaced around the roots. It would be well to add some rich compost to promote their growth. If, as is very probable, the top of the tree has become one sided, it should be pruned so as to restore the balance. In this way we have "righted up" pear trees six inches through the stem, but the best way is to look after the young trees and not permit them to depart from the way of uprightness.

Horses Driven to Excess.—By driving to excess we mean that horses are pulled and jerked, and twitched too much with the reins. There is too much guiding with the reins. Concerning this subject, the "Prairie Farmer" says (in truth) that the most vicious and inexcusable style of driving is the manner which so many adopt, to wit: Wrapping the lines around their hands and pulling the horse backwards with all their might and main, so that the horse, in point of fact, feels the weight back of him with his mouth, and not with his brest and shoulders. This they do under the impression that such a dead pull is needed in order to steady the horse. The fact is with rare exceptions, there should never be any pull upon the horse at all. A steady pressure is allowable, probably advisable but any thing beyond this has no justification in nature or reason. For nature suggests the utmost freedom of action of the head, body and limbs, in order that the animal may attain the highest rate of speed. In speeding a horse the lines need seldom be grasped in both hands when the road is straight and free from obstructions. The true way to drive is to let the horse drive himself, the driver doing little but directing him and giving him that confidence which a horse gets himself only when he feels that a guide and a friend is back of him."

Heaves in Horses.—The majority of horses affected with the heaves are immoderate feeders. In fact, experience has proved that over distending the stomach and bowels with food (particularly with an inferior article of provender) is one of the chief causes of heaves. According to this theory the principal means of cure rests entirely with the owner, who should enforce a judicious system of feeding both as to quantity as well as quality. Good sound oats, free from dust, must, &c., should be selected and fed morning and noon, carrots or cut feed can be fed at night. The animal should be fed three times a day only, and the quantity of food given should be limited in proportion to the labor the animal has to perform. A little prairie hay may be fed at night, and should be well shaken and sprinkled with salt and water previous to being fed. We do not think it advisable to turn a horse affected with the heaves to grass, simply because the morbid desire for food would be very likely to return, and the animal would, no doubt, improve the opportunity to gratify its depraved appetite. The nature of the food is also such that, comparatively speaking, it would take a much larger bulk to sustain the vital functions than food fed in a more concentrated form, consequently the stomach and bowels would be preternaturally distended, and the constant strain on the coats of the stomach would, no doubt, relax and weaken its natural functions.—Heaves is a complicated disease of the digestive and respiratory organs, and we must admit that vegetable food, on account of its laxative properties, constitutes an excellent diet for horses affected with this malady; but we insist that it must be fed in limited quantities, otherwise it will be productive of more harm than good. On the whole, we believe a horse with the heaves can be made very useful, if not effectually cured, by a proper system of feeding; but the good that is accomplished by
