

Farm, Home, &c.

Galls of the Skin.—Where the skin is chafed or galled by the harness, it should be washed with salt water, and when dry, painted with spirits of turpentine. This will heal the raw spots, and keep off the flies. To prevent galls, scrape and wipe off with a wet cloth the harness where it presses closely upon the skin.—Pads are to be avoided. A collar or other part that will admit of a pad under it, fits badly, and is almost certain to produce galls.

The Coming Price of Wheat.—The Michigan Farmer, whose opinion in such matters is entitled to much weight, anticipates that there will be a general drop in the price of wheat from this time till the income of the crop, when it will probably settle down to the lowest figures known since 1853.

The effect of these low prices on farming prosperity will act differently in different cases. As a general rule the prices of most articles are regulated by the price of food. When people can live cheaper they can work cheaper. The general feeling with producers is that low prices are evil, although the great abundance brings the low prices. It costs more to handle an abundant crop than a poor one, of course, but the cost is not in proportion to the expense. It costs proportionately less to raise a good crop than a poor one.

A Bad Custom.—The Agriculturalist contains the following with regard to farmers' breakfasts. A bad custom is prevalent in many families, especially among farmers, of working an hour before breakfast, attending to "chores," hoeing the garden, cutting wood, mowing, etc. This is convenient on many accounts, but is not conducive to health. The prevalent opinion is that the morning air is the purest and the most healthful and bracing; but the contrary is the fact. At no hour in the day is the air more filled with dampness, fogs, and miasms than about sunrise. The heat of the sun gradually dissipates these miasmatic emanations as the day advances. An early meal braces up the system against these influences. Every one knows the languor and faintness often experienced for an hour in the morning, and this is increased by exercise and of food. We do not agree with the boarding-school regime which prescribes a long walk before breakfast as a means of promoting health.

Weaning Calves.—The Rural New Yorker says: Having weaned many hundreds of calves, and having fifty years ago fed them morning and night myself, I can say with entire confidence that after the first week skin milk, warmed a little more than new milk is when drawn from the cow, will keep them in good growing condition. There is no "doubt" about this fact, for many thousands are raised in this way every year, and have been for years out of mind, before my day in the country. I was born in, and also in the States for the last twenty years; while in Canada they are treated just the same by hundreds of people. About four quarts of sweet skin milk for the first few times is enough, as giving more will retard them too much sometimes; six quarts afterwards, and if it can be spared, more as the calf grows larger. In winter or early in spring the calves require feeding with hay, a very little at first, and, of course, it should be nice soft green hay, and a little bran and oats, or bran and meal—two-thirds bran will make them thrive very fast.

To Keep Butter Sweet.—The Syracuse Journal publishes the following which will prove interesting to house-wives, and none the less to all lovers of sweet butter: Keeping butter sweet and good through the summer months is a problem which perplexes many Syracuse house-wives. They dislike to keep the favorite product in the ice-box, fearing that the motley smell of the meat and vegetables will contaminate it; they also dislike to keep it out that summer receptacle, fearing that it will melt or become very rank. Indeed, such results are not remarkable for their infrequency. An agricultural delegate to the Universal Convention, the other day, from the control part of the State, who has had a large experience as a dairyman, told of a simple method by which this difficulty can be remedied. Make a strong brine, using either table or barrel salt, and pour over the butter. He says a woman may wet her fingers in getting the butter from the jar, but she will find it well preserved. Butter should be kept from the air as far as possible. If so simple a precaution as salt and water will keep butter sweet and palatable, it is a bit of knowledge
