by Charpentier. Dumpen corn Brimble it over the carpet with a dry broom, and sweep it a brisky.

Farm Leases.—Like farm accounts, they should be simple. They should be in plain English what both parties agree to. All uncertain verbiage may be left out, but it is better to use all the words necessary to express the thing, and not leave any part to be understood.
Let the owner note with his pencil, every item which he wishes expressed, and what the tenant is to do, and what he is to receive. This put into plain words and subscribed, is the lease. There is little room for form.
Almost every lease is peculiar to itself, and would not suit another.

Care of Plants.—Don't forget that over-watering kills more plants than dryness. Pots in the house, especially the handsome glazed ones, should be provided with abundant drainage—broken pots, cinders, oyster shells, anything to make an open layer at the bottom; then a layer of moss to keep the earth from washing down, and then a soil made up by sand that it will always allow the water to pass through.
With these precautions there is no danger, but where the surface of the soil is muddy an hour after watering, there is something wrong and plants will not thrive.

The Use of Corn.—A Virginian writes in praise of corn, not only as the best food for laboring men, but for domestic animals of all kinds.
He states that the usual ration for a negro laborer, for a week, is one and a half pecks of corn, three pounds of bacon, and a little molasses. They thrive on it, and mules, as a rule, have only corn for grain, but they live longer and do more work than Northern horses that feed on oats.
In this part of the country dogs are fed almost exclusively on cornmeal, and they not infrequently eat corn in the ear, while wandering cars devour it on the stalk. Even cats eat cornmeal stirred up with water, as is the case of chicken feed.

Baked Corn.—Take a couple of quarts of shelled Northern corn place in an iron kettle, and cover with cold water. Tie in a cloth about two tea-cupfuls of good wood ashes, put in the bag with the corn, and boil until it takes strongly of the alkali.
Take out the bag and boil the corn slowly in the lye for an hour or so; then pour off the lye, and add cold water, and simmer. Then remove the hull of the corn by stirring; or, if not effected, turn off the water and rub the corn in a clean, coarse towel until all are removed. Then add more water, and simmer for several hours, frequently stirring to prevent burning. When the corn is swelled out large, and is thoroughly softened, add salt to the liking, and let the water cook nearly away. Eat warm or cold with cream or milk.
This, rightly prepared, furnishes a soft and delicate dish, which will be relished.

How Much Does a Cow Eat?— Dr. Robert Douglas Thomson, some years ago, carried out a series of experiments on feeding cows, in order to determine the value of matted grain as a food; and from his tables we derive that two Ayrshire cows, weighing 967 lbs. and 994 lbs., respectively, consumed in fourteen days 2,851 1/2 lbs. of grass, or 101 9/10 lbs. each per day. These same cows were fed on barley and grass consumed 35 lbs. of barley and 1,980 lbs. of grass in eleven days, or 4-3 lbs. of barley and 90 lbs. of grass per cow daily. In this experiment 4-3 pounds of hay seemed to replace about 13 lbs. of grass. This is not exact; but the gain and loss under the different systems of feeding were but slight, although there was a slight loss in the second.

Killing with Kindness.—At the approach of winter, it is early kept in mind to frequently see some of the more tender species of animals, and to slowly develop some of the more tender species of

THE SUN FOR 1879.
The Sun will be printed every day during the year, and its purpose and method will be the same as in the past: To present all the news in a readable shape, and to tell the truth about the people and the world.

The Sun has been, and will continue to be, independent of everybody and everything save the Truth and its own convictions of duty. That is the only policy which an honest newspaper can have. The only policy which has proved successful in the long run.

The Sun is the newspaper for the people. It is not for the rich man, but for the poor man and for the honest man. It is for the honest man, and it is for the honest man.

The Sun is a newspaper for the people. It
man, and it is for the honest man.
