Farm, Home, & c.

Do Not Let the Farm.

The fertility of the soil is the farmer's capital; on this depends largely his success or failure, and his great anxiety should be how best to keep it up to the highest point, at the least expense. It is a well known fact that it is much easier to keep it up as we go along, than, after it has been allowed to run down, to make spasmodic efforts to restore its former vigor. It does not pay to raise small crops of any kind; medium crops may just pay expenses, while that part of a large crop which is in excess of the medium crop is nearly all profit. Hence we know where to look for our profit, and study to devise the best means of enriching our lands at the least expense. There are several ways suggested. One man feeds stock; another ploughs clover under, another buys commercial fertilizers. The western man uses up all the fertility of the soil, and then goes farther to repeat the process. I have seen something of this system, having known lands in Central Illinois a few years ago produced one hundred bushels of ear of corn, and which now produces but eighteen bushels in a favorable season. They tell us that this soil will never wear out; I know of none that wears out quicker. The same is the case in our eastern states. The writer was on some New England farms some months ago, that had once been the home of thrifty but improvident people. The life of the land was gone; families were separated, and there was a dull prospect for a young man to begin life on such an impoverished farm, so these bright boys from the New England hillsides seek other and more lucrative avocations. They are full of energy and vitality, inured to the rigor of the climate, and the rough, hard land. Agriculture cannot afford to sacrifice such men. If farmers wish to keep their sons at home, they must keep up the fertility of the soil. Stock feeding is one of the most important branches of farming, and requires much judgment, care and attention. A prominent man said that to be successful with flowers you must love flowers, and as to be successful with stock you must love stock. The venerable John Johnston once told the writer that he owed his fortune and his reputation as a farmer to one pile of manure. While poor and in debt he bought an adjoining fifty acres on which there was an old barnyard containing an accumulation of twenty three years' manure. He found it to be a mine of wealth. He applied it to his crops which in turn gave great returns, and this not only gave him notoriety as a good cultivator, but gave him credit with moneyed men, who freely tendered him all the funds that he desired to buy stock with. After securing an immense crop of corn, he fed it to stock and made another great quantity of valuable manure, and so on, year after year. Mr. Johnston has fed thousands of sheep and vast numbers of cattle. It has been stated that in eighteen years of sheep feeding, buying in the fall and selling in the winter or spring, he never but once failed in getting pay for his feed, and a handsome profit on the investment. This shows that his judgment must have been superior, and that the stock had his personal and undivided attention. A wealthy stock farmer in Pennsylvania once told the writer that one drove of cattle will half feed the next: meaning that by applying the manure from one lot of cattle to the ground intended for corn, the crop would be much larger, and that this increased yield would cost almost nothing, while the extra burden of stalks would certainly make the increase a donation year after year. After the farm has become rich it costs almost nothing to feed stock, as they will live on the surplus. I believe it costs thirty cents per bus to raise corn, when you only raise fifty bushels of ears to the acre, but when one hundred and fifty bushels are raised, the cost is reduced to less than ten cents per bushel.—W. M. H. in the Country Gentleman.

Avoid giving a tired horse very cold water, as it often produces colic. In large establishments exhausted steam is passed through the horse troughs; others allow the water to stand for some time in buckets. On the road horses should be watered once in ten miles at least. The stomach of a horse is so small in comparison to his body that large draughts injuriously distend it; consequently, small quantities at regular intervals is the best rule.

THE SUN FOR 1879.

THE SUN will be printed every day during the year to come. Its purpose and method will be the same as in the past: To present all the news in a readable shape, and to tell the truth though heaven fall.

THE SUN has been, is and will continue to be independent of everybody and everything save the Truth and its own convictions of duty. That is the only policy which an honest newspaper could have. That is the only policy which has won for this newspaper the confidence and friendship of a wider constituency than was ever enjoyed by any other American Journal.

THE SUN is the newspaper for the people. It is not for the rich man against the poor man nor for the poor man against the rich man, but it seeks to do equal justice to all interests in the community. It is not the organ of any persons, class, sect or party. There need be no mystery about the love and hate. It is for the honest man against the rogues every time. It is for the honest Democrat as well as against the dishonest Republican, and for the honest Republican against the dishonest Democrat. It does not take its cue from the utterance of any political organization. It gives its support unreservedly when men or measures are in agreement with the Constitution and with the principles upon which this Republic was founded for the people. Whenever the Constitution and constitutional principles are violated—as in the vote-counting conspiracy of 1876, by which a man not elected was placed in the President's office, we are hostile enemies—it speaks out for the right. That is THE SUN'S idea of independence. In this respect there will be no change in its management for 1879.

THE SUN has fairly earned the hatred of rascals, frauds, and humbugs of all sorts and sizes. It forces to deserve the hatred not less in the year 1879 than in 1878, 1877, or any year gone by. THE SUN will continue to shine on the wicked with undiminished brightness.

While the lessons of the past should be constantly kept before the people, THE SUN does not purpose to make use of it in the manner of ancient history. It is printed for the men and women of to-day, whose concern is chiefly with the affairs of to-day. It has both the disposition and the ability to afford its readers the promptest, fullest, and most accurate intelligence of whatever in the wide world is worth attention. To this end and the resources belonging to well-established prosperity will be liberally employed.

The present disjointed condition of parties in this country, and the uncertainty of the future lend an extraordinary significance to the events of the coming year. The discussion of the press, the debates and acts of Congress, and the movements of the leaders in every section of the Republic will have a direct bearing on the Presidential election of 1880—an event which must be regarded with the most anxious interest by every patriotic American, whatever his political ideas or allegiance. To these elements of interest must be added the probability that the Democratic party will control both houses of Congress, the increasing embarrassments of the President's Administration, and the speed and strength with everywhere of a healthy abhorrence of fraud in any form. To present with accuracy and clearness the exact situation in each of its varying phases and to expound, according to its well-known principles, the principles that should guide us during the labyrinth, will be an important part of THE SUN'S work for 1879.

We believe the means of making THE SUN, as a political, a literary and a general newspaper, more entertaining and more useful than ever before; and we mean to apply them freely.

The rates of subscription remain unchanged. For the DAILY SUN, a four page sheet of forty-eight columns, the price by mail, post paid, is 65 cents a month, or $7.70 a year; including the Sunday paper, an eight-page sheet of fifty-six columns, the price is 85 cents a month, or $9.10 a year. Postage free.

The Semi-Weekly edition of THE SUN is published on every Monday, Thursday and Saturday, and is sent for $1.20 a year, postage free.

The price of the Weekly edition of THE SUN is one dollar a year, postage free. [illegible]
