Poetry. BEWARE,

Keep wakeful eye and ear, my friend, For all mankind; Thou canst not know nor tell, my friend What lurks behind The flattering speech, the gracious smi How little tretb, how much of guile, Is hid within the heart the while,

Remember, e'en thyself, my friend, Has crafty grown ; Consider how deceit, my friend, Erst deeply sown Within thy breast, slow fed upon Its kindlier nature, until won The victory o'er thy peace undone,

Ah, life's a losing game, my friend, A taunting blank— When love itself is tricked, my friend. By wealth and rauk:
Take council of thy wit, and seek
No favors that thy feelings pique—
Of both the fawning and the meek,

Trust him who makes thee pay, my friend, And squarely, too, For all he grants ; 'tis he, my friend, Alone that's true,
He hath no subterfuge, no plan
To cheat or cozen; such a man
Thou caust respect, and waive this ban;

A STORY SUCCESSFULLY TOLD.

Pretty, plump Mrs. Archibald

"John must come down here at once, whether you can spare him or not. Our dear little Laura is greatly taken with a tall, young man, with a hooked nose and thin lips, called Stuyvesaut. It is whispered about the Lotel that he is a very good match, and Daura's eyes—as, indeed all the other pretty eyes about—ore perpetually beseeching him for attention. In the daytime he is always with along black horse, that covers more ground with its less while it is going than any other ani-but is very work; legs while it is going than any other anibut is very weak and ill.
