Farm, Home &c.

Hints in Road Making

There is no class o the community that is more effected by the condition of highways than farmers. Upon them are transported whatever surplus products the farm affords, and upon them the farmer depends for his opportunities to pass from one neighborhood to another. Now as far as the transportation of heavy loads is concerned, the amount that can be transported bears a direct proportion to the condition of the road bed and its declivity, both of which may be combined to greatly reduce the load, or either alone may be the means of measuring the load that can easily pass along without serious hindrances. Aside from that class of obstacles which may properly be considered insurmountable, in all cases roads should be improved in every possible direction and by all practical means. Other things being equal, the more firm the road bed, the better it is for travel, and also the better for conveying loads. But very frequently the road passes over such a variety of soils, even in moderate distances as to present a variable surface; wherever such cases occur they can be amended by artificial means, that is if a portion should be sandy, by the addition of a little dry compact earth its condition will be so changed as to make it much harder and better able to sustain a load. Atmospheric conditions may also very materially affect temporarily the surface of a traveled road, aside from those changes occasioned by frost; thus a clayey road which would be rendered exceedingly muddy after a severe shower would be much improved by the use of gravel. Where the soil is inclined to moisture, a partial system of underdrainage will not only prevent mud at time of showers, but will also very much assist in maintaining a good condition when the frost is coming out in the spring, which otherwise would render it impassible.

As a general rule, in the repair, saying nothing of the construction of roads too little regard is paid to the material employed; it is entirely wrong to make use of vegetable matter that it subject to decay and change, for although when in a dry state it may be passable upon a road when wet by means of rain and showers it occasions slough holes of mud. It is better for the farmer, and certainly much better for the road, to have the sods growing in the ditches conveyed to the farmyard and used for composting, rather than have them used in any repairs. Where it can be obtained under ordinary circumstances a gravelly loam will make good average road bed, and will become so compacted as to form a comparatively hard and smooth traveling path and is the material that should be used. It is no uncommon thing to see upon a much travelled road at some point a short distance that is extremely bad under nearly all circumstances and which remains the same year after year for want of an application of a few commonsense ideas in the matter of repairs.

Roll Jelly Cake.—Take four eggs, one cup of sugar, one cup of flour, one teaspoonful of cream of tartar, one-half teaspoonful of soda, a pinch of salt; this will make two cakes. Spread thin on tins; as soon as they are baked turn from the tin, flavor your jelly, spread over the cakes and roll it up immediately; this will not break in rolling if there is not too much flour in it, will keep some time, and is acknowledged by all who try it to be the best they ever tasted.

Corn is undoubtedly the very best food for making hogs fat; but it is far from being the best food for producing a healthy, strong growth of the entire muscular and bony structure. Milk contains most of the elements of healthy growth for the pig, and to this corn-meal may be added. A good food for young pigs may be made by mixing middlings, oats, and corn-meal in equal proportions.

Molasses Doughnuts.—Take one cup of molasses, two-thirds cup of milk, one egg, and a piece of butter half the size of an egg, two teaspoonfuls of cream of tartar and one of soda; great in some nutmeg and use flour enough to roll out.

A Dish for Breakfast.—Take six good cooking apples, cut them in slices one-fourth an inch thick, have a pan of fresh, hot lard ready, drop the slices in and fry till brown; sprinkle a little sugar over them and serve hot.

Substitute for Bedding.—In Holland, where hay is more plentiful and cheaper, than hay, it is used for filling cows. This keeps the animals always entirely clean, and the milk never takes the odor of the stall.

The Buckeye is the very lastest improvement in Pumps. It is constructed with air-chambers which makes it very easy to operate. Hose can be attached to the Buckeye Pump, and water can be thrown upon any building in case of fire. You can water your Garden and Yard, Wash Windows, Wash Buggies, and have a
