Wheat for Chickens

A correspondent of the Country Gentleman writes as follows: "Every farmer has noticed that about the time of wheat harvest, if the fowls are allowed the run of the fields and barn yards, there is a material increase in the egg supply. I think the second fact is the natural result of the first. I have fed corn, oats, barley, buckwheat, flax and sunflower seeds, and have found nothing equal to whole wheat as food for fowls. For young chickens it seems especially adapted. After two or three days of feeding on soft food the young chickens will pick up the wheat quite greedily, and will thrive on it as on nothing else. Growing chickens have a large demand for lime, and especially bone materials, and this is more nearly supplied in whole wheat than in any other grain. If wheat were two dollars per bushel it would still be the cheapest food for young chickens. Farmers can, however, economize by feeding wheat screenings and damaged wheat which, though unsalable, is nearly as good for chicken food. In feeding wheat, if there are many weed seeds, due allowance should be made, as they are not so nutritious as the wheat. Some kinds of weed seeds are hurtful to chickens; but these they will reject if fed whole. Grassy weed seeds is of little benefit except to get rid of them, and this might better be done by fire, as they are of so little worth. Last winter we had several bushels of wheat so badly damaged by rain in harvest that it was condemned as worthless except for stock feed. It was given quite liberally to the hens, alternately with corn, and though the winter was very unfavorable for egg-production, the hens commenced laying early and have produced a much larger quantity than ever before. I attribute this to the damaged wheat, and shall see that wheat in some shape is supplied to the fowls hereafter."

Turkeys.—It does not cost any more, or much more, to raise a pound of turkey than a pound of hen flesh. In the summer they require to be fed less, being masterly campaigners on their own account, while in the winter very likely their nervous disposition demands somewhat more stimulus than other fowls. If well fed, they do not require nearly as careful housing as the hen, although it is good policy to make them roost in-doors; but left to themselves, they prefer to weather out the wildest storm in the tree-tops. Finally, when brought to market, their flesh is worth much more than that of the hen, so that, other things being equal, it is economy to keep them instead. Also, that it is worth considering, allowing that the percentage of loss of young turkey chicks under the most perfect management is greater than the loss of the common fowl, still turkeys that survive reach such a great weight that a given number of pounds of turkey may, perhaps, be raised with less labor than the same quantity of flesh of the common fowls.—Poultry Monthly.

A Leak on Many Farms.—One leak on nearly every farm may be found in the neglect of the agricultural implements. In travelling over the country it is no unusual sight to see plows, harrows, wagons, sleds, reapers, mowers, etc., piled in the fence corners, in the fields, lanes, barnyards and on the public highways. Whenever you see things piled around in this way, you can set it down that there is at least one leak on that farm. An excuse might be found for some farmers, of limited means, that they are not able to build shelter for their implements; but we find the same leak on farms where they count their acres by the hundred, and their dollars by the thousand. And of course the larger the farm the greater the leak. We believe a careful estimate of the annual shrinkage thus incurred by some farmers would astonish them, and show why farming does no pay.

Receipt for Calcimining.—Take four pounds of Paris white, put it in a pail, cover it with cold water and let it stand over night. Put into a kettle a handful of glue, and cover it also with cold water. In the morning set the glue on the stove, and add enough warm water to make a quart, stir it until dissolved. Add the glue to the Paris white, and pour in warm water until the pail is three quarters full. Then add bluing, a little at a time, stirring it well until the mixture is slightly bluish. Use a good brush, and go over one spot on the wall till it is thoroughly wet. If your brush dries quickly, add more warm water, as the mixture is too thick. The brush must be kept wet. This mixture costs thirty-eight cents.

YOU WILL BE SORE

if you replace that old Pump with a new one or do not first carefully examine the Buckeye Force Pump.

The Buckeye is the very latest improvement in Pumps. It is constructed with air-chamber which makes it very easy to operate. Hose can be attached to the Buckeye Pump, and water can be thrown upon any building in case of fire. You can water your Garden and Yard, Wash Windows, Wash Buggies, and have a
