He is in search of an office—for wishing the Democratic ticket or wishing its success.

To-day everything in the country that can be controlled by party action is in a good condition as its party managers can make it. To the success of the Republican party we owe the stability of business institutions as brought about by Resumption, the withdrawal of a wise and reasonable tariff, and the firm support of those laws and that policy which has engendered in men's minds a sense of power and security. This is no idle claim because the Republican is yet sharp in every sense of the word the bitter struggle between the Republicans and Democrats for the success of the measures which have been of such wonderful benefits to the country.

It can be broadly asserted, and the truth of the assertion is obvious, that every feature of the policy which has proved so beneficial has been opposed by the Democrats with every means at their command, and that if they are not committed to a reversal of that policy which this strenuous opposition would imply, they are, at least, as hostile to that policy as to render it nugatory and helpless, if they should succeed. Still further, the evils of which the country has the most reason to complain are those the waste and extension of the Democratic policy, so that a change which will cast the Republicans and install the Democrats will not only avail all the good things that we now enjoy, but will also rid us of the evils which we have dreaded and warred against for a half century.

This being the case, what reason can there be for a change? Even if that was approximately, or even quite as good as the present Republican administration, we would be exceedingly foolish to change for the sake of change. What then can be said of the folly which suggests a change which can not help being much for the worse, and may be infinitely so?

They Want a "Change."

Tammany wants a change. The Kullux wants a change. The ex-rebels want a change. The Repudiators want a change. The White-Liners want a change. Dennis Kourney wants a change. Pirate Garcelon wants a change. The bounty-jumpers want a change. The ballot-box stuffers want a change. The obstructionists in Congress want a change. The men who fired on Fort Sumter want a change. The men who declared the war a failure want a change. They who were traitors in 1861 all want a change. The frauds North, East, South and West want a change. The men who have Southern claims want a change. The men who set fire to the City Hall want a change. The men who want to rob the government want a change. The men who tried to steal the State of Maine want a change. The men who committed the atrocities at Andersonville want a change. The men who want to pauperize American mechanics want a change. The men who engaged in fighting the resumption of specie payments want a change. The men who put the rights of the State above the Federal government want a change. The plunderers, blatherskites and agitators, who revel and thrive in the prevalence of bad times, want a change.

You do not hear Bob Toombs say that his letter was a fabrication—the letter in which he said that the south would run the machine if Hancock was elected. Toombs is not that sort of a man. He always means what he says, and says what he means, as he did when he promised some time to call the roll of his slaves on Bunker Hill.

"Sam, what is the difference between a cullid man and a nigger?" "Gib it up," says Sam. "Well, I'll tell you. The cullid man, you see, votes for the party dat made him free and giv him a vote, while the nigger ticks he'd better be slave again and hab no vote. That am the difference, Sam." The above occurred up town a few days ago.—Leviavon Gazette.

Nasby, who now signs himself "Pacifier," says of Hancock was a trile more of a man than he is. He's got opinyuns enuff, but he's got more opinyuns than he bez no lege. He ain't heavy in proportion to the party which nominated him. I find it thunders' hard work to sing a longmetre hymn to a shortmetre toon. But I spose of he is elected he will learn suthin about governmental matters. Anyhow, the kentry may keyones upon it that he will allow hev me to lean on to."

People who are puzzled as to how Indiana will go, lose sight of the fact she is naturally a Republican state. It elected Hendricks by above two thousand majority, but in 1872 it gave a majority for Grant by over twenty thousand. Since 1860 it has only voted once for a Democratic Presidential ticket, and that was in 1876, when times were at their darkest and there was a feeling that any change would be an improvement. If the Republicans carry Indiana next month they will only be recovering their own.

"No shoulder strapped military educated men for high civil offices, was the cry of the Democrats in 1868, when General Hancock's name was mentioned in connection with the Presidential nomination.
