For District Judge, J. MERRILL LINN, of Lewisburg, Subject to election of the District Conference. For Sheriff, DAVID REICHEL, of Centre. For County Commissioners, JOHN REITZ, of Franklin; JOHN M. MOYER, of Middleburg. For County Treasurer, AARON S. HELFRICK, of Beaver. For County Auditors, DANIEL DIEFFENBACH, of Penn; GEORGE W. SIENER, of West Perry. State Ticket. State Treasurer, SILAS M. BAILY, of Fayette.

E. W. Y.—We offer the following as answer to your inquiry. You will observe by careful reading that we gave it as our opinion that he "would not receive more than a dozen votes in Snyder county," and we based that opinion on our knowledge of the class adherent to the party nominations in state and national contests—further, on the fact that the convention was a bare majority—and still further that it is part of our creed that the Republican party has not yet fulfilled its whole mission—that the party is largely endowed with good, common sense and noble power—that to the mass of the party it is of but little concern whether "old bosses" or "new bosses" run the machine—and last, but not least, that the party has intelligence to know and moral courage to admit that brains and money are more "needful" in conducting party warfare than "vanity of vanities" and much noise. We have always held him in the highest esteem as a citizen and a politician, but however much we may esteem him we cannot aid, counsel or abet him in experimenting with the success of the party—the chances for defeat being greatest—to gratify an insatiable desire for nothing more valuable than notoriety of a questionable kind. Had he possessed himself at the proper time, to-day he would rank one among the most popular men of the state. We have never yet dictated to any one how he should vote—it is the highest prerogative of the American citizen—nor have we the audacity to undertake to control any one in the free exercise of this sacred privilege. We have, in common with other men, the right to express our opinions—and that man, who has no deference for the opinions of others has no respect for his own. Waste pleased that you wrote us and we give you our answer to-day with equal pleasure. We are still in hopes that he will see the error of his way and come back to his first love. It is never too late to do good. E. W. C., did you ever hear of a sane man killing his unruly son to reform him? Ed.

I look forward with joy and hope to the day when our brave people, one in heart, one in their aspirations for freedom and peace, shall see that the darkness through which we have traveled was but a part of that starry but beneficent discipline by which the Great Disposer of Events has been leading us on to a higher and nobler national life.—James A. Garfield.

This public life is a weary, wearing one, that leaves one but little for that quiet reflection which is so necessary to keep up a growth and vigor of Christian character. But I hope I have lost none of my desire to be a true man, and keep ever before me the character of the great Nazarene.—James A. Garfield to Henry Boynton.

General Chester A. Arthur, through no doubt of his own, is now President of the United States. He has been duly sworn to faithfully discharge the duties of the office, and it is the duty of all good citizens to give him their encouragement and sympathy in the performance of the responsible and delicate duties devolving upon him.

There were ninety cases on the criminal calendar of Erie county at quarter sessions court of last week.

A Synopsis of Scenes and Events at Cleveland.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 25. The remains of General James A. Garfield arrived at Cleveland on Saturday at 1-15 P. M., and were received and escorted to the catafalque which had been previously erected. Yesterday they were viewed by more than 10,000 people. The day was bright and beautiful, though rather warm. The streets began to be thronged very early. People poured into the city by every avenue of approach, and all the railways ran every available car to accommodate the unexampled crowd. Monumental Park was the centre of attraction. Perfect order prevailed, everybody being imbued with the solemnity of the occasion. Hundreds wept as they gazed on the casket containing the remains of the dearly beloved Chief Magistrate. The coffin was not opened, it being the widow's wish that the face should not be exposed on account of its unnatural look, but instead the visitors looked upon the features of the dead depicted in an admirable portrait placed just above the head. The order of the obsequies have been announced, but the body, instead of being interred to-day, will be placed in the receiving vault of Lake View Cemetery.

At His BIER. A few more sad ceremonies and heartfelt emotions over the mortal remains of the second martyr-President, and the busy world which has devoted itself for the past week to honoring his memory will turn from his tomb in tears to resume its duty to the living. The final scene upon such an occasion is always the saddest, and so it will be to-morrow. The dark harvester never gathered a life the history of which will live as the one finding resting-place to-morrow in the beautiful cemetery overlooking the tireless waves of Lake Erie. His body now lies surrounded by the most magnificent of mourning emblems that were ever devised in this country to demonstrate a people's sorrow over the loss of a single man. His sufferings and his tragic death will live in history when others are forgotten. Being here among his kindred and neighbors every one of whom know him, it is evident that the story of his life has never yet found its way into print. The occasion which drew out what has been printed of him made it impossible to tell aright and with terrible truth the real facts of his birth, boyhood and manhood. Great contemporaneous political events are never truthfully portrayed. But now, that death has closed his earthly career and all harsh criticisms are silenced in the over-whelming recognition of his worth and eminence as a man, the rugged facts all calculated to make him nearer and dearer to his countrymen will be written in living letters.—Philadelphia Press.

One point in reference to President Garfield is not even yet properly appreciated by people generally, viz: He was an exceptional man. His character and powers were so well rounded, so evenly developed, that he did not appear great in any one direction. He was, however, a man of remarkable power. He had a reserve force which few gave him credit for, and which could be drawn upon when occasion required to an almost unlimited extent. This was demonstrated at different times during his life, but the culminating instance of it was given since he was struck down by the ball of the assassin. Even non-demonstrative surgeons were forced to express their astonishment at his wonderful powers of endurance. It is worthy of remark that at no time in the late President's life was he placed in a situation which he did not summon into play resources amply sufficient to meet every demand of it. It will probably be conceded henceforth that Garfield's pre-eminence was the power to impress others. He scarcely had a contemporary with an equal ability to stir those who came under the range of his influence. His wonderful readiness in expressing himself upon almost every subject, was not only the chief element of his power. He was a man of feeling, of strong, nervous, intense emotions, and when those resources were given away, even in what seemed a half-suppressed manner, they carried with them a force which could no more be resisted than understood. How many were the signal instances of his victories in this line! How often has he swayed vast, turbulent, discordant assemblies, established quiet and harmony and order! How uniformly did he emerge from such trying ordeals with the respect, even the ardent admiration, of those upon whom he exerted such a potent sway! To have accomplished all that he has in this respect he must have had great powers of mind and heart and will. Of all things for which James A. Garfield will be justly held in high distinction, his almost phenomenal power to sway masses of men will be among the most conspicuous.

...The tanners of Cameron county send calf skin to Paris. ...Philadelphia conceals two thousand red birds every day. ...Pittsburg contains the most adroit safe robbers in the United States.

...At points the Juniata is low enough for people to walk from shore to shore. ...Less butter is produced now in the state than was ever churned at this season.

...It is found that at thousands of trees of every variety are dying in Chester county. ...Forest fires continue to rage in Wayne, Pike, Clearfield, Monroe and Elk counties.

...The four prisoners who escaped from the Northumberland county jail are still at large. ...Woods fires are raging in Erie county on a larger scale than ever they burnt there before.

...A number of people living at Hyde Park were recently poisoned by eating canned salmon. ...The tanners in Pike and Wayne counties have been compelled to stop work for want of water.

...Pennsylvania cheese overshadows all the exhibits in the same class at the state fair. ...There is not corn enough in this year's crop in Forest county to supply seed for next year.

...The Lehigh Valley railroad company has repainted all the depots along the line of that road. ...The butchers of Erie had a barbecue Wednesday, at which a large ox was roasted whole.

...John Moss, of East Lampeter township, Lancaster county, owns a stallion that kills and eats chickens. ...The meadows in the Lebanon valley look as yellow as corn fodder after it has been stacked in October.

...There is a cat in North Coventry township, Chester county, which has adopted and is raising a rabbit. ...Over a thousand head of cattle have been passing through Pittsburg daily for six weeks for the eastern market.

...Fully a hundred sheep were killed in Washington county by dogs, during August, some of which were valuable. ...The Pittsburg Telegraph admits that a man cannot well help his name, but it does look very comical to see a Baum at the head of Philadelphia select council!

Ex-President Hayes is still an office holder. He was recently elected commissioner of highways for his native town. ...The festive Greenbackers of Blair county have put a ticket in the field and they are quietly waiting for bids.

...Iroquois has won in stakes alone this year 16,130 English pounds. ...The sales of public land for the fiscal year 1881 are reported to have exceeded the sales of any other year in the history of the government. This is due, doubtless, in some measure, to the largely increased immigration during the same period.

...A man in Pike county built himself a house last winter in a clearing near the forest, and this discovered that his dwelling was in the midst of a rattlesnake den. He, with others in the employ, has killed over a thousand of the venomous reptiles since May.

...A company of English capitalists, headed by the Duke of Southampton, have purchased sixty square miles of land in Iowa, on the St. Paul and Omaha Railroad, sixty miles east of Sioux City, for the purpose of founding a colony. They have a capital of $12,500,000.

...The Star Parlor Organ Company and Beatty's immense Organ factories, at Washington, New Jersey, were totally destroyed by fire on Sunday afternoon. The loss is estimated at $200,000, partially covered by insurance. Four hundred men are thrown out of employment.

...It is stated from Washington that the Commissioner of Pensions has discovered a "ring" in his department through whose instrumentality thousands of fraudulent claims have been pushed through. We have no doubt that a very great deal of fraud pervades, and it would be a good thing for the government to give the whole business an overhauling.—Ex.

One great loss has overshadowed another which was greater to many of our citizens. Out on the great prairies of Michigan are thousands of men, women and children gathered together, who are now bewailing and mourning not only the loss of those dearer to them than life, but of all their earthly goods as well. Not acres, but miles and thousands of miles of what were lately smiling fields now are black and desolate. Above them still rises the smoke, out of burning fields alone, but of hundreds of burning bodies. There it is where the eyes now wet with tears for our noblest citizen may turn to gaze upon the losses which no one would deplore more sympathetically than our late President. Thither the efforts of the charitable should at once be turned. In the present shock it is hard to realize that another exceeding great calamity has taken place, and that no sufficient measures have been taken to restore the loss so far as possible. Now is the time when new crops are sown in the fertile region which lies devastated. There will be none, or at least very few, to sow them, for the inhabitants have lost their all. Food, clothes, money are needed. There could be no more deserving change in which to pour any or either of these necessities, for winter will soon be coming on and everything that the Michigan sufferers can get will be needed.—Philadelphia Press.

By command of General Hancock, Light Battery C, Third artillery, has been ordered to march from New York to Yorktown, where it will form part of the forces to take part in the centennial observances at that point in October next. The battery commenced to march on Thursday last via Trenton, Philadelphia, Columbia, Baltimore and Washington, and as far as practicability will follow the route taken by Washington's forces in 1781. The people along the route will have the pleasure of a view of the regulars, and there is an appropriateness about the affair which will do much to remove the feeling that it is foolish for men to be compelled to tramp three or four hundred miles in these days of rapid transit at cut rates.

Schenck county coal operators are supplying the eastern cities with more coal at this season than was ever shipped before at the same time.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Feb. 2, 1880. I know Hop Bitters will bear recommendation honestly. All who use them confer upon them the highest commendation, and give them credit for making cures—all the proprietors claim for them. I have kept them since they were first offered to the public. They took high rank from the first, and maintained it, and are more called for than all others combined. So long as they keep up their high reputation for purity and usefulness, I shall continue to recommend them—something I have never before done with any other patent medicine. J. J. BABCOCK, M. D.

It is simply marvellous how quickly consumption, biliousness, sick headache, fever and ague, and malaria, are cured by "Sellers' Liver Pills."
