

HUMOROUS.

A little near-sighted boy in Mason county, Va., was sent by his employer, on Friday or Saturday, to drive up a mountain, and while he was rowing down with the cattle, some five or six head, a severe rain began to fall. The boy, who was on a mule, had all of the cattle gathered up under a large oak for shelter. While there a flash of lightning shivered the tree, killed the mule, knocking the little negro about twenty feet off from it, and killed all the cattle. The little negro was only stunned, and as soon as he recovered made his way as fast as possible to his master, and with tear or lapped in his face told him that he was "under de tree to keep out ob de rain, de debbie run down in a street ob fire, frowed him from de mule and den killed all de cattle and mule and run off wid dem."

The young milkman and his girl stood before the Justice of the Peace. "You take this milk—them!—them for butter or for worse?" the mighty man of the law inquired. The girl said it had never a cure to her before, but she supposed she would if that was the only way.

A correspondent writes, "Just after we left Hancockville, Judge O., of Charlottesville, commenced his jokes, and soon had all the passengers in a roar." "I'll tell you what I can do," said the judge, "you may think of any time you please, whether I have heard it or not, and by seeing you keep the time with your fingers, I can tell you what you are playing." The correspondent was skeptical. After thinking a moment, he commenced playing on the back of a seat in front of him, with all the grace of a professional. "What an playing you!" he asked eagerly and with a stare of astonishment. "You are playing the fool," replied the judge.

"Mother," asked Mary Jane at the breakfast table last Monday morning, "don't you think gray hair is awful becoming?" Mary Jane, it should be remarked, has a bona fide white hair. "Yes, I do," replied the mother, grinning at something on Mary Jane's shoulder. "Yes, I think it's becoming too common. That makes the tooth one this morning" making it up between her thumb and finger.

A famous lawyer, having been asked for more than a trial of a suit, was asked by a man, who said: "I have a boy whom I want you to take and make a lawyer of."

"How old is he?" said Mr. "He's 18 years old, stout and rugged, he's got a pair of lungs like a bellows," replied the father.

"Has he any of the usual qualifications?" "Yes, he's got the one great qualification of a lawyer," said the father: "he's the confoundest liar in our town. I thought when I heard you in our court-room just now that it wouldn't take very long for Sam to come pretty high up to you."

There are 100,000 commercial drummers in the United States—the largest brass band on record!

The boy who knocked another down with a piece of ice should be awarded for carrying congealed water.

Chinese barbers shave without lather. This reminds us that our old-fashioned used to lather without shaving.

The young man who used to sing so divinely, "Oh, had I the wings of a dove," is satisfied with a chicken leg now.

The clam has a larger mouth in proportion to its size, than a human being, yet a clam never talks about its neighbor.

A very small boy can get outside of a very large watermelon in a very small piece of time; but it takes a very large doctor to harmonize the two.

"Durn the dog!" he said, "I'll settle his back for him, when I go down there to see Kate, to-night." And he proceeded to saturate the seat of his trousers with strychnine.

In the sweet, balmy, delicious happiness of love's first young dream, a youth will not only insist on cracking walnuts for his girl, but on picking out the good ones as well. Two years after marriage he will not even let her have the nutcracker until he is through. Girls get married!

Freddie went to the funeral. When he returned his mother asked where the text was. He couldn't tell where it was, but he knew what it was, and he repeated it: "Zo's dead, and they went up the road." The text was, "Man goeth to his long home and the mourners go about the streets."
