

HUMOROUS.

The Commercial Traveller and the Beans. They tell a good story about one...

"Madame," said she to the lady, "give me some dinner, and be quick about it. I have not dinner since yesterday."

The lady brought him some breakfast. "Madame, take that soup away, I never eat that soup. Bring me the roast right away."

The lady brought him a large plate of pork and beans.

"Madame, take that away. I never eat those things." In vain the lady explained that pork and beans was the best the house afforded.

The unfortunate drummer saw a word in the air, and was forced to shove four plates of the welcome food down before the cowboy was satisfied with his apology to the landlady - Reno Gazette.

The Man Who Watched.

A day or two ago, soon after the hour of noon, an individual who seemed to be laboring under considerable excitement entered a grocery store on Michigan avenue and asked for a private word with the proprietor. When the request had been granted, he explained:

"I believe myself to be an injured husband, and I want to verify my suspicions by watching a house on the other street. This I can best do from the rear of your store. Have you any objections to my taking a seat back there by the open window?"

The grocer granted the favor, and the agitated stranger walked back and took a seat on a box of codfish and began his watch. His presence had almost been forgotten, when he returned to the front of the store, with hasty step and quivering voice and said:

"Great heavens! but I'll kill her! Yes, I'll shoot her through the heart!"

"Your wife?"

"Yes, my idolized Mary! I can no longer doubt her guilt, and I'll be a murderer in less than ten minutes." The grocer tried to detain him, but he broke away and rushed around the corner. Not hearing anything further of him for half an hour the grocer began to investigate, and he discovered that fourteen rolls of butter, a crock of lard, two hams and other stuff had left the back end of the store by way of the window, at which the watchful husband was stationed.

A headville man in one week was stacked and scratched by a catamount, hurt by an explosion, had a boiler roll down on him and stayed in two ribs, and was kicked by a mule. And a local editor remarked that he had "been somewhat annoyed by circumstances lately."

"Let us play we were married," said little Edith, "and I will bring my dolly and say, 'See baby, papa.'" "Yes," replied Johnny; "and I will say, 'Don't bother me now, I want to look through the paper.'" Children have strange ideas of grown folk's ways; now, don't they?

A newspaper agent, being told by an old lady that it was no use to subscribe for the papers now, as Mother Shipton said the world was coming to an end this year, said: "But won't you want to read an account of the whole affair as soon as it is over?" "That I will," answered the old lady, and she subscribed.

A young man from the country saw steam fire engines working at a conflagration upon his visit to the city and asked his father, "What in thunder makes 'em bust the water by steam to put the fire out with? Cold water's a darn sight better."

During a trial for assault in Arkansas a clerk, a cook, a man, a handle, a knife and a shot gun were exhibited as "the instruments with which the deed was done." It was also shown that the assaulted man defended himself with a revolver, a scythe, a pitchfork, a chisel, a hand saw, a nail and a cross dog. The jury decided that they'd have given $5 apiece to have seen the fight.
