

HUMOROUS.

"Was Sold Out Coat."

Yesterday morning a tall young man of 20 landed at the Union Depot with a bundle under his arm, and after three or four minutes spent in getting his bearings, he walked up Jefferson Avenue and turned into a clothing store.

"Do you wish to try on some coats and vests for a dollar?" asked the proprietor, as he peered from behind the counter.

"No, I guess not. Do you feel on the square?"

"My friend, dot is exactly what I does. I was an square dot I lose $1,000 last year. Can I sell you an oafere at for $10?"

"No, I guess not. Here is an oafere that I bought of you four weeks ago."

"Bought of me?"

"Yes, I think your are the man. When I got home we found that it was moth-eaten. I can pick it up to pieces in a dozen places."

"Is it possible? Uud how much did you pay?"

"Eight dollars."

"My sthars! Uud that you want oaf?"

"I want my money back."

"Vhell—vhell, my friend, I am sorry for you. You seem like an honest boy, and it vvas too bad."

"Y a, it was a swindle, and I want my money back."

"Dear me, but I wish you vva here yet today! Let me explain to you you bought it dot coat four weeks ago?"

"Yes, four weeks to-day."

"Vhell, I had sold out to my cousin Philip just one day before. Philip was not a square man."

"What have I got to do with Philip?"

"Let me explain. In three days Philip makes assignment to my brother Louis. Dot Louis is a hoodler off. He would shoot your eye-teeth away from you."

"Yes, but I haven't anything to do with Louis."

"Let me explain. Louis kept it r pieces a week, and to give a shotted mortgage to my fadder-law, and vvas bounced out."

"I don't know anything about that."

"Let me explain. My fadder-law vvas took out a fit and oafed, and the leaf dis blage to my wife. My wife vvas gone to Europe for two years, and she leaf me agint. Now you see how it was. I cannot tell you who sold you dot coat. Maybe it was Philip, maybe Louis, maybe my fadder-law. It couldn't have been you, I r I vvas in Shticago. If you leaf dot coat I vvd write to my wife. She is square, shant like me, and maybe she writes back dot you can take a linen duster and two white vests, and call it all right."

"Say, this is a sneaking swindle, explained the young man."

"Mabe it vvas. Philip vvas a great bar."

"I'll go to der police!"

"Vhell, dot is right; maybe der police still help me catch Louis. I shud found out last night dot he eat all der hind buttons off all der coats to der store before he left."

"If you'd step out-doors I'll mash you."

"Vhell, I like to oblige, but you see I vvas only agint for my wife."

"Well, you'll hear from me agsin, and don't you forget it," said the victim as he went out.

"I hope so—I hope so. I like to make it all right. I vvas only agint for my wife, but I feel so square dot I take dot coat back for three dollars if you want to trade it out in paper collars."—Detroit Free Press.

"Ls, me," sighed Mrs. Partington "here I have been suffering the bigamies of death for three mortal weeks. First, I was seized with blessing phrenology of the left hemisphere of the brain, which was exceeded by the stoppage of the left ventilator of the heart. This gave me an inflammation of the brain, and now I'm sick with the choreform morbus. There is no blessing like that of health, especially when you are sick."

Practical Arithmetic.—"You can't add different things together," said a school teacher. "If you add a sheep and a cow together it does not make two sheep or two cows." A little boy, the son of a milkman, held up his hand and said: "That may do with sheep and cows, but if you add a quart of milk and a quart of water, it makes two quarts of milk I've seen it tried."

We ask your young readers to say the following alliteration as rapidly as their tongues will allow after they have committed it to memory:—Five brave maids; sitting on five broad beds braiding broad braids; said I to these five brave maids sitting on five broad beds braiding broad braids, braiding broad braids brave maids.
