Poetry.

At The Last.
The stream is calmest when it nears the tide,
The flowers are sweetest at the eventide,
The birds most musical at the close of day,
The saints divinest when they pass away.

Nothing is holier, but a holier charm
Folded close in Evening's robe of balm,
The weary man must ever love her best,
The morning calls to toil, but night to rest.
She comes from Heaven, and on her wings doth bear
The holy fragrance, like the breath of prayer,
The steps of angels follow in her trace,
And thus the weary eyes of day in peace
All things are hushed before her as she throws
Her earth and sky her mantle of repose;
There is a calmer beauty and a power
That Morning knows not, in the Evening hour.

At the evening we must weep and toll—
How life's stern furrow, dig the weedy soil,
And tread with soft feet our rough and thorny way,
And bear the heat and burden of the day.
Oh! when our sun is setting may we glide
Like summer Evening down the golden tide,
And leave behind us, as we pass away,
Sweet, stary twilight round our sleeping clay.

The Lady Shoppers.

A woman enters a dry goods store,
Steps to a clerk who stands near the door,
Asks him to show her the latest style,
And she pulls over the goods mean-while.
She says, "I want a dress for my niece;
Will you please show me that under piece?"
Oh, I didn't see 'twas a polka spot,
That is too near like the one she's got,
That piece with the stripes would just suit me,
It's just as pretty as it can be;
But she wants a better covered ground
With a sort of a vine running all round.
She don't want too dark, nor yet too light,
Or a striped piece, nor yet very bright;
I think she'd like what you showed me last,
But do you think the colors are fast?
Cut off a bit, before I decide
I'll take a piece home and have it tried,
I had a dress like that last fall,
And the colors did not wash at all,
I like those patterns there on the end,
I'll take a few samples for a friend,
Now one of this, if you'll be so kind,
And a bit of that, if you'd not mind.
They're the nicest styles I've seen this year,
I must always do my trading here,
I have got a piece that came from here,
I forgot the price—'twas pretty dear,
It's a sort of a dark alpaca stuff,
I want to match it, I've not enough,
Do you think you have it in the store?
My dress is spoiled if I can't give you more,
Will you put these samples in a bill?
I'll know where I got them if you will,
I'll take them home; if she thinks they'll do,
You'll see me back in a day or two."

Select Tale.

A Wonderful Escape.

BY EUGENE EMERSON.
Some years ago, I went with a young friend to pay a visit to his grandfather, who lived in Delaware county, Pennsylvania.
One evening my friend asked his grandfather to give me an account of an adventure he had when a boy (I shall endeavor to relate it in his own language as nearly as possible).
My father had failed in business in Philadelphia (began the old gentleman) and had concluded to try his fortune in the western part of the State.
He started first and erected a log cabin, and then returned for my mother and myself, I was then a boy of ten.
At this time the Indians were at peace with the whites, so we lived in comparative safety.
All went along well until my father was stricken down with fever.
My mother, who was as good and noble a woman as ever lived, had to support the family and also to the

As I was thus resting I heard a great rustling close by, and not knowing what it was, thought it best to climb a tree.

I had no sooner reached the first branch, than to my terror I saw a large bear come up to the very tree I was on.
I placed as great a distance between him and myself as I could.
While he was growling and looking up at me, I heard the crack of a rifle, at the same time the bear fell over dead.
In a few minutes a couple of white hunters came up, and while they were examining the bear I descended the tree.
After hearing my story they promised to take care of me and deliver me safe to my uncle, which, in the course of a couple of weeks they did, and thus I was providentially saved.

REBEL PRISONS.

The shops of the city had mostly been closed, and one of the guard told me that every prison in Richmond was either a prison or a hospital. Though this may have been exaggeration, it was no doubt a fact that all the dwellings of Richmond had their spare rooms occupied by Confederate sick and wounded.
In this city the infantry guards were relieved, and a cavalry escort furnished, who showed their confidence in our desire to reach our lines by letting us struggle as we had a mind to.
During the day we marched without food, and finally late in the afternoon, a feeble cheer went up from the advance, which told that the flag on our transports was in sight.
Need I say how wildly our hearts beat at the sight of that dear old flag which we had followed in battle, and which had floated among the peaceful scenes of home. The feeling was too deep to be expressed in words or cheers. Tears of joy rolled down the cheeks of many a stout man, whose eyes were unused to weep; the voice that attempted expression was lost in choking sobs.
Men sat quietly down, tears coursing their dirt-farrowed cheeks contented to look up and see the "old flag" floating over them.
I sat in this manner, having, without knowing it, a quiet, joyful cry, when a comrade came along, inquiring "what are you blabbering about old fellow?"
I looked up, and saw he hadn't much to brag of, and replied, that I was crying because folks were such fools as to live under a flag with three stripes, when they might have one with thirteen over them. We hoisted anchor, left those scenes, and came, at last, sick, maimed, emaciated, camp up at Annapolis. There kind hands cared for us, kind welcomes cheered us, and we knew we were at home at last—at home with the arms of a great nation around us with the great love of noble, loyal hearts. When I left Belle Island, I had no hair or hat to put on my head, and my clothing consisted of a pair of pantaloons and a shirt, and these were all tattered and torn. The rest of the boys were no better off, and some far worse—they could not cover their smoked black as negroes from the nakedness—and we were all pitch-pine smoke—I am confident our fathers and mothers could not have recognized us as their sons—after our arrival at Annapolis—we got plenty to eat, and the consequences were bad, quite a number of the boys died, and others took chronic diarrhoea, and had quite a time to recover—But this was one of the grandest times in our lives—I hope we may never be so unfortunate as to become prisoners of war again.

As I was thus resting I heard a great rustling close by, and not knowing what it was, thought it best to climb a tree.

The Newer Arithmetic.

A citizen whose gas bill was $7 for the month of January shut his house up for two weeks in March and his gas bill was $7 75. How much did he make?
If a butcher-cart going at the rate of a mile in three minutes strikes an Alderman who is walking at the rate of four miles an hour, what is the resisting power of each?
A County Treasurer knows of a deal sure thing in wheat, and he puts in $3,000 of the people's cash. The distance from his town to Canada is 180 miles, and the average speed of a railroad train is thirty five miles an hour. Find—but they never find 'em.
A lady bought some tape for eleven cents, and some thread for two cents, and worked off a quarter with a hole in it on the peddler. How much did she save to buy tracts for the heathen?
