It should be a general, cheerful hopefulness, that builds no airecastles of exchange, or speedy libera tion by raids, but sees hope even in the circomstances of misery, and draws comfort and consolation from the thought, that things can be no worse. There must be a kind of mental "don't-care" sort of tecklessness of the future, combined with doing what you can to comfort yourself now, which is, after all, the preservation of a soldier in thousands of cases. There is a kind of armor of indifference which yields to circumstances, but cannot be penetratway to melancholy despondency, as thousands naturally do under such circumstances, the lease of such a man's life in prison is not worth purchasing.
