ODE BY S. C. WHITTER.

Sung at the Esset Co. (Mass.) Agricultural Fair One morning, at the first sad Fall, Poor Adam and his bride Est in the shade of Eden's wall—

They heard the air above them fanned, A light step on the sward, And, lo! they saw before them stand The angel of the Lord!

Behind them, smiling in the morn, Their forfeit Garden lay; Before them, wild with rock and thorn, The desert stretched away.

She, blushing in her fig-leaf suit For the chaste garb of old; He, sighing o'er his bitter fruit, For Eden's grapes of gold.

Arise!" he said, " why look behind, When Hope is all before, and patient hand and willing mind Your loss may yet restore

"I leave you with a spell whose power Can make the desert glad, And call around you fruit and flower At fair as Eden had. vi I clothe your hand with power to lift

The curse from off your soil; Your very doom shall seem a gift, Your loss a gain, through Tork. "Go, cheerful as you humming-bees,

To labor as to play."

—And gleaming over Eden's trees.

The angel passed away. The pilgrims of the world went forth, lient to the word. +

And found, where'er they tilled the earth, A garden of the Lord! Unce more, oh! white-winged angel stand, Where man still pines and grieves,

And lead through Toil, to Eden-land, New Adams and new Eves! From the National Intelligencer. The Chinese Sugar Cane. Washington, January 27, 1857.

To the Editors of the National Intelligencer. GENTLEMEN: As public attention is everywhere directed to the culture of the "Chinese in a northern climate, by planting the seed sugar cane," I would respectfully request you sufficiently late to allow its maturity to octo publish the following revised report of the remarks of D. J. Browne, Esq., at the recent frosts. He had observed that the juice did session of the United States Agricultural Society held in this city. Your obedient servant,

BEN PERLEY POORE, Secretary, U. S. A. S.

EXTRACT PROM THE OFFICIAL REPORT. The chair called up the subject of the Chinese sugar-cane (sorghum saccharatum) for ed instances of cows which had been fed upon discussion, and, by unanimous consent of the this cane exclusively giving a diminished

Mr. D. J. Browne, of the Patent Office, could say but little more than was already known to the public, but was willing to ansbe put to him. The main points elicited in tember and the 15th of October, but unequally in the same fields. In some instances it stood excessive drought, as well as the light frosts of September and October, without injury. When the stalks were cut or eaten off near the ground by animals in July, new shoots sprang up and perfected their growth. Other plants were suffered to stand after their ripened seeds had been removed, and new panicles put forth in October, at their had been informed that plants were left in South Carolina in a similar manner, the stalks of each of which ripened several successive from eighty to one hundred days after planting. He also said that five crops of fodder had been cultivated in Florida the past sea- cal mode of restoring fertility to exhausted son from the same roots, the last perfecting lands.

The amount of seeds produced to the acre in the District of Columbia varied from fifty to sixty bushels, yielding in many cases a gill plants to the acre he estimated to be from fourteen to thirty-three thousand pounds.-He was informed that in one instance, in Kentucky, nine tons of fodder were raised to an acre, as weighed after three months' drying. As a fodder plant he thought its geographical Paul in Minnesota, and fully ripened its seeds in Massachusetts and Illinois. It grew with well manured, with an aspect but partially exposed to the morning and evening sun, havexposed to the sun during the day, the plants did not attain more than half these dimensions. He remarked that both sirup and sugar had been manufactured from the juice in this country, as well as in France. The sugar which he had seen was both in a crystalizable and uncrystalizable state, the latter technically known as "grape sugar." Sirup of a superior quality had been presented to him from New Hampshire, equally as good as that extracted from the perennial cane.-By adopting the usual process in this country of making sugar from the maple, by boiling down the juice in a single kettle, one would rarely succeed in making a good article from the West Indian cane. In Cubs and elsewhere it was a common practice in manufacturing "muscovado" sugar, first to cut the canes near the ground, deprive them of their tops and leaves, convey them immediately to the mill, crush out the juice by means of three cast-iron or wooden rollers, and cause it to flow to a series of boil. I awley & Gmild would respectfully invite ers of peculiar construction, to which are applied various degrees of heat. In the first boiler the juice is raised to a temperature boiler the inice is raised to a temperature which they are now receiving and are selling at very somewhat above blood heat, and a small low prices; consisting in part of Dry Goods, Grocer-quantity of line-water is added to neutralize ies, Crockery, Hardware, Paints, Oils, Ready made the acidity. It is then transferred success ively into the other boilers, undergoing diffe. rent degrees of ebullition, tempering, and other manipulations, which can only be learned by practice, until it reaches the point of In addition to their stock, they are now receiving erystalization. below, and runs into a received apparatury to putting it up into casks. As soon as the dripping is completed, which lasts several days, and the sugar becomes moderately dry, the pots are carried to wooden platforms, the augar emptied out, pulverized by beating, and then packed into boxes or casks, for ship-

It was stated that, by means of optical inopinion that this cane contained the greatest as happy and pleasant as anybody. amount of saccharine matter when the seeds were in their milky state, and that the richness of the juice mainly depended upon a hot sun, a continued summer heat, and a warm, moderately rich soil, but not upon the latitude in which it is cultivated, as had been inferred. From three fourths to seven eighths of the stalk consist of juice, which varies in richness according to the size, vigor, and healthiness of the plant. That taken from a and a half in diameter, grown in the District of Columbia, on the moist loamy land referred to above, yielded only fourteen per cent. of dry saccharine matter; while that from a stalk about nine feet in height, an inch in diameter, cultivated on light land in Massachusetts, gave twenty-three per cent. Further niore it was asserted that alcohol of a superior quality and agreeable tuste, resembling noyeau, had been munufactured from it-a bread-saving crop being thus supplied-and that, if redistilled with grape seeds, it would produce an excellent brandy. But a difficul-ty had been apprehended, both in the manufacture of sugar and alcohol, from the fermentation of the juice in warm weather, owing to the short time left for the manufacture. This, however, he thought might be obviated, cur during the time of the light autumnal heat it soon partook of the nature of eider, be bent.

In respect to its nutritive properties he citquantity of milk, but of increased richness of quality. He had seen two stock cows, not was requested to give his experience in res- giving milk, which had subsisted entirely uppect to this plant. He first observed that he on it for six weeks, that were in good condition for the butcher. In another case the seeds were thrown broadcast, and the crop wer any questions on the subject which might used for soiling. The animals fed upon it in relation to this product from his remarks and replies may be summed up as follows:

Mr. Browne had had three years' experience in the culture of this plant. He first saw it grow in France, in 1854, and had experimented with it in the District of Columbia the two succeeding seasons. It was cula green state throve well, affording excellent bia the two succeeding seasons. It was cul- matured, which renders it more difficult to tivated in various localities, differing in the crush for the purpose of obtaining its juice, character of the soil, its exposure to the sun, and its infitness as fodder for animals withits moisture, dryness, degrees of fertility, &c. out being reduced to fragments by cutting, The seed was planted at different distances though, when thus reduced it is greedily deapart, with plants a foot assuader along the voured by cattle, horses, sheep, and swine. drills, or in hills, with a corresponding num. The only insects he had observed to attack it ber of stalks to each. The time of planting were a species of green plant-lice, (aphides.) varied from the 1st of May to the 20th of which appeared to do no essential harm. The June: That sown early in May did not gerseeds, he thought, could be raised at about to be a good article, or the Soap may be returned and minate before two or three weeks, but ma- the price of oats, and would prove highly valtured, its seeds somewhat earlier than that unble for the purpose of feeding to animals, planted late; that sown on the 20th of June if not employed for human food. When dematured some of its seeds nearly as soon as prived of their pellicles of covering they had that planted on the 10th of the same month. been used in France in the manufacture of The seed tipened between the 10th of Sep- chocolate—the pellicles themselves being employed for dyeing silk, imparting shades varying from a pale-violet to a rose-carmine.

As to the fact of this plant exhausting the soil, Mr. Browne thought there was no doubt. Judging from its analogy to the perrenial cane, he believed that at least half of its ash consists of phosphates, and more than one fourth of silica. He did not think it advisa- in the most scientific manner, on all who may be which is offered for sale, as cheap as can be bought ble to apply to this crop much, if any, stable or other ammoniacal manures, as it would appermost joints, but did not mature. He flourish on an indifferent soil by the addition of a moderate quantity of bone-dust, phos phatic guano, wood ashes or poudrette. If thus cultivated, and the crop fed out to the panicles of seeds. The seeds will mature animals on the farm, and their manure returned to the fields on which the plant grew, it could not fail to be a direct and economi-cellent vinegar, fifteen hundred gullous of

In conclusion, on being asked for his candid opinion as to the adaptation of this species of cane to the wants and economy of the United States, Mr. Browne averred that, as a forage to a stalk. The weight of green matured crop and a restorer of exhquited lands, more especially those of the Atlantic and Gulf States, wherever the corn plant would thrive. it cannot be surpassed by any other product. It was also his belief that it would produce sufficient strup, and perhaps sugar, alcohol, As a fodder plant he thought its geographical and vinegar, to supply the demands of the range would correspond to that of Indian whole country, in all situations where the corn, as it had been grown as far north as St. plant would develop its seeds to a milky stage. He would not, however, advise the farmers to be too sanguine in adopting his the greatest luxuriance in a moist, loamy soil, views, and thereby run into undue speculations by excessive cultivation, nor in making unwarrantable expenditures for the purchase ing attained a height of seventeen feet, with of machinery and seeds. He had no hesitastalks an inch and a half in diameter. On tion in predicting that its adoption would be dry indifferent soils, unmanured, and fully general, and that at no distant day it would be ranked among our staple crops. CORNS.—The best cure for these troublesome things that we ever tried is to soak the feet in hot water for a quarter of an hour, so that the corn becomes soft and then trim it off as close as possible, and not cause pain. Then take the tincture of the Arbor Vite. placed upon a little cotton and apply to the corn, and after a few applications the corn will not only disappear entirely but will not be likely to return again .- Scientific American.
