Having thus given some of my reasons why I cannot believe the Constitution some. Strange things are uprisingtime slavery; I come to the question of the imitation of Kansas as a State, and I will try to show why, in my judgment, Congress As I have already remarked, this territory has been dedicated to freedom. Now, taking off the restriction does not legally admit sinvery there, although such is the doctrine of the Smith, and such, I regret to say, has been the practical working of the act. Congress yet our prevent it, can yet see that the Contituling is made a living, active instrument for the protection of men.
