As a class farm gardens fall short of those found in villages, and in the suburbs of out eities. It probably will not pay for a farmer to lay out an acre or two of land in the highest style of the art of landscape gardening and employ men educated to the business to keep it. But it will pay better than any other portion of his farm, to till one acre in the most thorough manner, to raise the fruits and vegetables he wants for his own family. It is a reproach to the class, as the feeders of the world, that their own families are often not half as well supplied with fine fruits and vegetables as the mechanics and laboring men in the village. The standing excuse is, that they are dependent upon the field crops for their profits, and these must have the first claim upon their attention, by which they mean that they have no time for the small business of planting beds and keeping them clear of weeds. They do not believe it pays to cultivate such vegetables as are common in all good village gardens. They have indeed a small patch called a garden, but it is more abundantly stocked with weeds than anything else. It is so long neglected, both in planting and cultivating, that the weeds always have the start, and keep it through the season. The boys become thoroughly disgusted with it, and the term gardening is always associated in their minds with weeding the onion-bed and cutting up pig-weed and puralain among the beans and potatoes.

Some farmers, we rejoice to know, have turned over a new leaf, and for a few years have cultivated a good variety of vegetables and find it both pleasant and profitable to associate with their salt junk, cabbages, parsnips, lettuce, peas, beans, onions, squashes, &c., This month is the time for all the remainder to commence thorough work in the garden. Manure thoroughly, and plow deep. Then look over the lists of some reliable seedsman, and select such varieties as you like, and plant them seasonably. A few dollars spent in this way will give you more satisfaction, and we think more profit, than any other investment in seeds upon the farm. Try it and see .- American Agriculturist.

CONSECTION OF AGRICULTURE, WITH THE MECHANIC ARTS. - Another object of which we should never lose sight, and which interests the town and the country alike, is the encouragement of domestic manufactures. The inhabitant of the city is not more interexted in the prosperity of its young and growing manufactures than is the farming community about it. Every village in the State is tie market; and the most prosperous agriculture is in the vicinity of such markets. There is the domestic agricultural population. It is ascertained by the recent census of New York that the counties of that State, which have domestic markets in their manufactoring places, have a good deal increased in pophave diminished. 1. SHADING OR PARALLEL RULING .- If good bills be closely examined, the larger and some other parts, will show a uniform of parallel lines, all perfectly straight, or agement, are a frequent crop; and on large when curved, uniformly so, and of imiform except, of course, where in skies it gradually fades out. These parallel lines are made by ORION CULTURE.—S. Wright, of Granville, a ruling machine; and hence their perfection. the same may be said of the 3. LATHE-WORK.—This appears most frequently at the ends or corners of a bill, in the form of wheels or ovals; and generally contains the denomination of the bill. It is executed with an engine known as the geometric lathe; and while the patterns produced are of an endless variety, the curved or dotted curves forming the wheel are always very fine, regular, and perfect, and usually intricate in their course. These are so common on bills, and hence important, that it is possible counterfeiters may sometimes, by some of the various processes of copying engravings, obtain counterparts of them for use. At all events, when they rely on the hand and graver to produce this work, the imitation is coarse, irregular and blotched, and made up of points rather than of lines.

4. SEROPYAN'S PATENT.—This consists in coloring the principal portion of the paper of a bill with a faint oil color, usually yellowish, leaving parts in the form of figures or letters expressing the denomination, of original white color. These bills can not be photographed. on account of their peculiar hue and unequal coloring; they cannot be altered to higher denominations without coloring up the white space, and then if other figures in light spaces be required, the chemical which removes the oil color will also remove the printing ink: and for the same reason they can not be copied by the anastic or chemical process. Thus banks adopting the yellow paper bills are not likely to be troubled with alterations; nor with counterfeits, except such as must be totally unlike the genuine.

Altered Bills usually show the effect of corrosion of the liquid employed to efface the denomination, either in the lettering or paper of the bill; and the same is true when the of spurious bills by a numerous and very name of the bank, instead of the denomination, is altered. Besides, the denomination, necessary that every person who handles may be covered up by a slip containing the money should have, in his mind, or ready at new number or bank pasted over the old .hand, some means, as unmistakable as the Any of these alterations may be detected by nature of the case will, for the discrimination holding the hill up to the light—the increased thickness at certain points, or the old number, The following brief and practical rules will will then appear. Town LIBRARIES. - We extract the followof the object, so that, although level as other | ing from the N. Y. 'Tribune' of April 6th: An excellent bill has been introduced into the Pennsylvania Legislature giving to the cities, boroughs and townships the power of establishing public libraries for the use of their inhabitants, and of levying, for that purpose, a tax equal in amount to one dollar for every taxable inhabitant. This plan of township libraries has been al ready tried in the State of Indiana with entire success. It is altogether a better one than our New York plan of school-district libraries, which has proved to a great extent a failure, The money which, divided among a number of school districts, is frittered away to very little purpose, would suffice to purchase a town ibrary of considerable extent, composed not of books, as is pretty much the case with our school libraries, adapted to children merely, but proper for adult reading. These town-ship libraries, once established, would be likely to receive large accessions from the gene-announce to the rosity of individuals, and might serve as a large stock of center of reunion and point of attraction in connection with debating clubs or societies such as Dry Goods, Dress Goods, Cloths, Cassimers for mutual-improvement, which would keep many young men from taverns and other haunts of dissination.
