There was a coarse, mocking laugh from the crowd of half drunken wretches standing near. The eyes of Richard flashed angrily; but the voice, and still more, the imploring look of his mother restrained him.

"Let us return home," she said, in a despairing tone, " I feel faint and sick at heart." And leaning on the arm of her son, the unhappy wife tottered rather than walked from the place. The keen, frosty air partially restored her strength and Rachel proceeded with her children till she reached the thoroughfare leading through St. Margaret's churchyard towards the Almonry, when a faint moan from Mary, DRY GOODS, whom she still carried in her arms, arrested -her steps. She placed her hand under the thin faded shawl which covered her; the whild was cold as ice, and shivering, as if seized with an ague fit. "She is dying!" ground the terror strick-en parent—" dying for the want of food !" The heart of her boy could endure no more -it was breaking. The cop of misery and endurance had been filled to overflowing. His brain was on fire-tears could not quench it.

"Take her house mother !" he cried-"take her home ! never fear but I will bring you food ! Mary shan't die ! I'll beg-beg,' he added; "any thing to save her !', "Richard Richard! do not leave me!"

shrieked his agonized parent. "Let me not lose both my children! if you love your mother, return-for pity's sake return !"

The appeal came too late. Her son, stung, maddened beyond endurance by the sufferings of those so dear to him, had broken from her feeble grasp, darted down the thoroughfare, and was already beyond, the reach of her voice. Rachel clung to the railings of the churchyard for support, till a second moan, still fainter than the first, sent a pang through her maternal breast, maternal breast. "She must not die in the street!" mur-mered Rachel: "Home-home! if I have DRUGS, strength to reach it."

rength to reach it." "Oh, God !" she cried with a sudden burst of anguish, " protect my boy !! Shield him from crime; guard him against vices and the hidecus snares which in a thousand forms assail unfriended youth; or take hin," she added solemnly, "take him in Thy mercy." It was a Christian's prayer wrung trom. a mother's heart, uttered in faith, in agony, and tears; and angels bore it to the mercy. seat on high. Clasping her perisbing child yet closer to her aching bosom, the drunkard's wite bastened to her home.

As Richard Hoffman rushed along the street, scarce knowing whither he went, and only intent on the one idea of getting, by some means, food for his famished mother and sister, he was hailed by Jack Manders, an impish acquaintance who lived near Richard's home, and to whom he told the desperate state in which he had left those so dear to him. Jack listened with much interest, and at once proposed to Richard to help him to pick the pocket of an old gentleman, who was staring into a window on the opposite side of the street. Richard refused with horfor, although Jack urged the necessity of at once getting something to save the life of his mother and little Mary. Jack then undertook the business alone, and just as he had relieved the old gentleman of his pocket-book, a policeman sprang from a doorway to arrest him ; but Jack made good his escape. Not so Richard, who was at once seized by the policeman as an accomplice of the escaped pickpocket.

"I am no thief, sir," cried Richard break. ing from the strong grasp that held him, &c. The future history and trials of this poor boy will be given in the New York Ledger of January 16, which is for sale at all the bookstores and news offices,
