From the Janesville Gazette. BOARDING ROUND. Let others give a fancy sketch, My truthful reminiscences Are on the shady side. Twas in a famed New England State,

Where teachers still abound, I took my first certificate,
And went to boarding round. With courage strong for one so young, (My age was scarce fourteen, But you must know that Yankee girls Are never very green,)
With courage strong, and heart elate,
I trod the untried ground—
The teaching part was pleasnt work,

But O, the boarding round! To Mrs. Smith I first applied-She wished to put it off;
Her 'help' had left, and little sis
Had got the whooping cough.
The Mallorys were cleaning house,
But Mrs. Jones, I found, Was always ready to receive The teacher, boarding round The Browns were very clever folks,

(As easy people are,) They heaped my plate, and wondered why I did not cat my share. I went to bed, but not to sleep,
For soon, alas! I found Teachers were not the only race
Who lived by boarding round. Those sun-dried dinners, mile-long walks
Through dust, and mud, and rain,
That heavy satchel tugged to school,
And then tugged back again.

Such were the stern realities Which on my pathway frowned, Some five and twenty years ago, When I went boarding round

O, rolic of the darker age.
When custom made the laws.
I blush for that community
Who would defend thy cause. Let all who with the galling chain
Have hitherto been bound,
Exclaim with one united voice, We'll never more board round.

Doing up Considerable Sleep. "Away out in Missouri "they live on the caravansaries by the goad-side. A Lady's Opinion of a Ladies' Man. Mrs. Stephens, in her excellent monthly magazine, thus 'pitches in' against a class of men which is becoming far too numerous; "Our own private opinion of the lady's man is, that he is thoroughly contemptible—a sort of specimen of this life hardly worth thinking about a nut shell with the kernel withered up-a handful of foam drifting over the wine of life, something not altogether unpleasant to the fancy, but of no earthly use. A wordan of sense would as soon put to sea her residence in a card-house, as dream of attaching herself to a lady-killer. "Women worth the name are seldom deceived into thinking our ladies' man the choicest specimen of his sex. Whatever their ignorance may be, womanly intuition must tell them that the men who lives for great objects, and whose spirits are so firmly knit that they are able to encounter the storms of life—men whose depth and warmth petticoats, where the laborer has no Sabbath, of feeling resemble the powerful current of a and the magistrate no sense of honor; mighty river, and not the bubbles on its sur where the roads hear no vehicles, and the mere beauty of form or features that these where the needle points to the South; where him this, he would only laugh; he has no self in nourning—we ought not to be aston-pride about him, although full of vanity; and ished to find a literature without an alpha-

A GERMAN PRACTICE.—There is a practice among the Swiss and Germans of boring unto fruit trees, (with an instrument made for the purpose,) and pouring in liquid manure to force the tree forward, and also enable it to resist the drouth in dry weather. A have practiced this for four years with some fine Seckel pears, in dry land, with good success. Avoid this after September first, as it will induce a second growth late in the fall, which will be quite irregular and very liable to be winter-killed. The instrument I use is the common iron bar, which can be driven in among the roots without injury. Take for a wash, (as I buy no "special" manures,) to three-fourths of a barrel of water, four quarts of ashes, two quarts of lime, two shovelfuls of night soil—stir up well, and pour into holes made as above, what the tree requires. Soap suds are capital for this purpose.—Rural New Yorker. The above is unquestionably a good practice, where unfortunately a proper preparation of the soil has been neglected, and it might do well for old trees in grass land, as by top dressing the manure goes rather to, fred the grass than the tree.-American Farmers' Magazine. Indiscretion does more mischief in the world than ill-nature; for while the latter attacks only its enemies, the former injures alike both friends and foes,

The substance of the conversation, as overheard by our informant, was as follows: The gentleman expressed himself some did not approve of the mode of sale but stated at the same time, that there was a he should, arising from the nature of his business. The minister inquired what the difficulty was, "I am an Editor, sir."

The minister assured him that that was a very honorable calling; one in which he might do a great deal of good; and he could not see how that presented any hindrance.' "But I am a Democratic Editor, sir, and support James Buchanan and the Lecompton
