From Chambers Journal. THE PATH THROUGH THE CORN.

WAYY and bright in the summer air— Like a quiet sea when the wind blows fair, And its roughest breath has scarcely curled The green highway to an unknown world— Soft whispers passing from shore to shore, Like a heart content—yet desiring more; Who feels forlorn, Wandering thus on the path through the corn? WAYY and bright in the summer air-

A short space since, and the dead leaves lay Corrupting under the hedgerow gray; Nor hum of insect, nor voice of bird, O'cr, the desolate field was ever heard; Only at eve the pallid snow Illushed rose red in the red sun-glow; Till, one blest morn,
Shot up into life the young green corn. Small and feeble, slender and pale,

It bent its head to the winter gale, Hearkened the wren's soft note of cheer, Scarcely believing spring was near; Saw chestnuts bud-out, and champions blow, And daisies mimic the vanished suo *, On either side of the path through the corn.

The corn—the corn—the beautiful corn, Rising wonderful, morn by morn, First, scarce as high as a fairy's wand, Then, just in reach of a child's wee hand, Then growing, growing—tall, green, and strong, With the voice of the harvest in its song, While in fond scorn
The lark out-carols the murmuring corn.

O strange, sweet path, formed day by day, How, when, and wherefore—tongue cannot say, No more than of life's strange paths we know Whither they lead us, or why we go, Or whether our eyes shall ever see The wheat in the ear, or the fruit on the tree, Yd-who is forlow?

Heaven, that watered the furrows, will ripen the

The Ocean and the Mountains. One of the prettiest conceits and most truthful comparisons of the ocean and mountains, says the New York Sunday Times, we find among Mr. Holmes's paragraphs in his inimitable "Autocrat of the Breakfast Table," in the Atlantic for September. Nothing could by more picturesque and poetic, nothing more like the reality in an imaginative I have lived by the seashore, and by the mountains.—No, I am not going to say which is best. The one where your place is is the best for you. But this difference there is:

you can domesticate mountains, but the sea is feræ naturæ. You may have a hut, or know the owner of one, on the mountainside; you see a light half-way up its ascent in the evening, and you know there is a home, and you might share it. You have noted certain trees, perhaps; you know the particular zone where the hemlocks look so black in October, when the maples and beeches have faded. All its reliefs and intaglios have electrotyped themselves in the medallions that hang round the walls of your memory's chamber. The sea remembers nothing; it is feline. It licks your feet—its huge flanks purr very pleasantly for you; but it will crack your bones and eat you, for all that, and wipe the crimson foam from its jaws as if nothing had happened. The mountains give their lost children berries and water; the sea mocks their thirst and lets them die. The mountains have a grand, stupid, loveable tranquillity; the sea has a fascinating treacherous intelligence. The mountains lie about like huge ruminants, their broad backs awful to look upon, but safe to handle; the sea smooths its silver scales until you cannot see their joints—but their shining is that of a snake's belly, after all. In deeper suggestiveness I find as great a difference. The mountains dwarf mankind and fore-shortenthe procession of its long generations. The eternity, and of that it sings its monotonous song forever and ever. Yet I should love to have a little box by the sea-shore. I should love to gaze out on the wild feline elements from a front window of my own, just as I should love to look on a caged panther, and see it stretch its shining length, and then curl over and lan its smooth sides, and by and by to begin to lash itself into a rage, and show its white teeth, and spring at its bars, and howl the cry of its mad but to me harmless fury. And thento look at it with the inward eye-who does not love to shuffle off time and its concerns at intervals-to forget who is President and who is Governor, what race he belongs to, what language he speaks, which golden headed nail of the firmament his particular planctary system is hung upon, and listen to the great liquid metronome as it beats its soleinn measure, steadily singing when the solo Fluid with com. burner, 60 cts per gall. 14 " or duet of human life began, and to swing Gas at $2,25 per 1000 feet, just as steadily after the human chorus has died out, and man is a fossil on its shores?

WATER IS FOOD .- Tell the first man you meet that water is, on the whole, more nutritious than roast beef, and that common salt, or bone ash, as much an edible as the white of an egg, and it is probable that he will throw anxious glances across the street to assure himself your keeper is at hand. Make the same statements to the first man of science you meet, and the chances are that he will think you very ignorant of organic chemistry or that you are playing with a paradox. Nevertheless, it is demonstrably true, and never would have worn the air of a paradox. if men had steadily conceived the nature of an elementary substance. That is an aliment which nourishes; whatever we find in the organism, as a constant and integral element, either forming a part of its structure, or one of the conditions of vital processes that, and that only, deserves the name of aliment. If "to nourish the body" mean to sus. tain its force and repair its waste-if food enters into the living structure—and if all derived from food-there can be nothing improper in designating as nutritions substances those which have an enormous preponderance among the integral constituents. People who think it paradoxical to call water food. will cease their surprise on learning that water forms two thirds of the living body.

An Infallible Preventive and Curative FOR DYSPERSIA. Take any quantity of wheaten meal (the meal of any other grain HERE WE COME will answer,) mix it with pure water into a dough; roll it out into very thin cakes or crackers—the thinner the better—bake it in a quick oven or stove. The dish on which it is baked should be dusted over with the who will favor us with their custom, at "live and let meal to prevent it from sticking

This great remedy has also been tried in various other complaints. It is a sovereign cure for jaundice and the torpid liver-even superior to blue pill mass. It promotes healthy action of the bowels more effectually than seidlitz powders. For a "goneness" i the stomach there is nothing equal to it. . It beautifies the complexion better than the balm of flowers; and as a sweetener of the breath, all the aromatics. of Araby are not to be compared with it. It cleans the teeth and BUILDING MATERIALS generally. better than a dentist, and is a never-failing protection against the spasmodic cholers and yellow fever. Children who use it freely never die of convulsions.

It is to be taken two or three times a day, as a principal part of the meal. If it does not agree with the taste at first, it may be seasoned with any pleasant fruit, or a mealy
