The Lilv's gracious head All low must die, Because the gentle summer now is dead.

Grieve, oh ve Autumn Winds! Summer lies low,
The rose's trembling leaves will soon be shed;
For she that loved her so,

Alas is dead; And one by one-her loving children go. Waii on, oh ve Autumn Winds!

She lives no more.
The gentle Summer with her balmy breath, Still sweeter than before When nearer death,
And brighter every day the smile she wore!

Mourn, mourn, oh Autumn Winds, Lament and mourn;
How many half-blown bads must close and die;
Hopes with the Summer born
All faded lie,
And leave us desolate and Earth forlorn!

How to Increase the Value of a Cow. Everyone who owns a cow can see at glance that it would be profitable to increase the value of her, but every man cannot see how to do it. We can and we think that we scan make it equally palpable to our readers. If a cow is kept for butter, it would certainly add to her value if the butter-making propr cties of her milk thould be improved. In Summer or Winter this can be improved just as the yield of a cultivated crop can be large share of public patronage.

We would lender our thanks to our old customers. improved by what is fed to each, and it is simply a question of will it pay, in manuring one or feeding the other. Indian corn will add to the quantity and quality of the butter to a very sensible degree, and it is simply a question of easy solutions by experiment, whether it will add to the profit of the butter-maker to buy corn at one or two cents a pound, and convert a portion of it into but ter at 25 cents a pound, or whatever the market price of corn and butter may be, and another portion of it into manure, for that is the natural result of the chemical change produced in the laboratory of a cow's stomach. The same result will follow any other kind of feeding. Good pasture will produce an abundance of wilk, often as much as the cow can carry; but does it follow that even then it will not be profitable to feed her with some more oleaginous food to increase the quantity of butter, just as it sometimes proves profitable to feed bees to enable them to store more honey. It certainly does appear to us that the value of a cow, feeding upon ordinary Winter food, may be almost doubled by making that food suitable for the purpose of increasing the quantity of milk if hat is the object, or the quantity of butter, if that is the purpose for which the cow is kept. Farmers generally understand that they can convert corn into beef, pork, and lard, and some of them know exactly at what _price per bushel it will pay to convert it into these substances; but does any one know at what rate it will pay to convert corn or any other grain into butter, or any other kind of feed into any of the dairy products? Is the whole business a hap-hazard one?-We fear so. Some persons know that they can increase the saleable value of butter by adding the coloring matter of carrots to it.

Does any person know the value of a bushel

When animals are newly killed, there is the acrd secretion in their flesh which turns blue litmus paper red, and which renders their flesh easy of digestion if it be eaten immediately. In a few hours, however, this , acid evaporates, and the meat becomes hard and difficult of digestion, till it has been softened by cookery, or-kept-sufficiently long to have become tender, from the process of decomposition having commenced. In Liebig's recently published work on the "Chemistry of Human Food," we are told that boiling flesh slowly effects a chemical change in its composition; and, according to the length of time employed in boiling, and the amount of water used, there takes place a more or less perfect separation of the soluble from the insoluble constituents of flesh; the water or soup in which the flesh has been boiled containing the soluble matter, and the bouilli or meat from which the soup was made, consisting chiefly of fibrous, insoluble matter, nearuscless as nourishing food. Thus it is obvious that when the water in which the meat has been boiled slowly is thrown away, by far the greater part of the soluble or nutritious matter is wasted. A very different mode of cooking should be adopted when it is wished to cat the meat. The muscular fi- The Artist's Rhymes bre of flesh in its natural state is everywhere surrounded by a liquid containing dissolved albumen. When this is removed by boiling with water, the muscular fibre becomes hard and horny, and this hardness increases the longer it is boiled. "It is obvious, theretore," observes Liebig, "that the tendersess of boiled meat depends upon the quantity of albumen deposited between the fibres, and there coagulating; for the contraction or hardening of the fibres is thereby, to a certain extent, prevented. If the flesh intended to be eaten he introduced into the boiler when the water is in a state of brisk ebullition, and if the boiling be kept up for some minutes, and then so much cold water added as to reduce the temperature of the water to one hundred and sixty-five or one hundred and fifty-eight degrees, the whole being kept at this temperature for some hours, all the conditions are united which give to the flesh the qualities best adapted to its use as food. When it is introduced into the boiling water, the albumen immediately coagulates from the surface inwards, and in this state forms a crust or shell, which no longer permits the external water to penetrate into the interior of the mass of flesh. But the temperature is gradually transmitted to the interior, and there effects the conversion of the raw flesh into the state of boiled meat. The flesh re-

WHAT FENCES COST .- The expense of fencing a farm per acre has been variously. estimated at from three to six dollars, and one curious in statistics might readily calculate the total value of fencing in this country. Probably at the lowest, it would amount to $500,000,000, or an annual expense of repairs of $50,000,000, or more. The interest on capital invested in fences and woodland required for renewal, would swell the amount to one billion of dollars—a pretty small sum truly. Many farmers fence too much-have their inclosures too small."
