The Moslems, seeing the crowd gathering round, and fearing the consequences that might result to themselves, heat a retreat, and left the lime in the possesbion of its rightful owner. The kowass having informed the consul what had taken place, the consul determined to obtain satialaction for the insult offer-ed to the kowass. He brought the matter before the governor, and city council; but they, being Mohamnedans, were reluctant to do anything against two of the most influential members of their sect, and moved so slowly that Yanni at length wrote to the Pasha and Consul at Beirut, and finally succeeded in stirring up such a tremendous fuss that the Moslems were glad to make peace on almost any terms. When the United States Frigate Wabash made its anobarance here a few weeks since. the report was circulated-I do not know how extensively-that unless'indemnity for shaking the kowass was made in less than twenty-four hours, the ship would bombard the town!

It is said the Governor manifested some "uneasiness when he heard the frigate's guns firing a salute; and when two of the officers of the ship appeared in his palace asking for a hearing, he exclaimed with consternation, "What does all this mean ?" A waggish fellow, standing near by, replied, "Your excelency, this all grew out of the affair of the lime." The ship remained but a single day, and sailed away as peacefully as it came. The Moslems, however, began to think it was quite time that the difficulty between them and the consul hould be adjusted. They requested him to meet them at the house of one of their Sheikas. To this he would not assent. "Meet us then," said they, at the house of the Greek bishop." He answered No." " At the house of one of the consuls ?" "No." "I am willing to meet you," he replied, "either at ny own house, or at the house of the American missionaries, and receive whatever apology you have to nake." The city council after consulting togethe with the offending parties, concluded that if it would be agreeable to the American missionaries; the proposed meeting should be held at their house. And this was the business the governor came to see me about to-day. He went into a full explanation of all the circumstances of the case, giving, of course, the Moslem side of the story, and closed by proposing, that if it would be agreeable to me, the meeting of all the parties concerned should be held at my house. To this I readily consented, he having requested me to fix a time for said meeting. I suggested 3 o'clock of the next Monday afternoon, to which his honor agreeed, and soon after he and his guards politely nok their leave.

the private praying circle have I been profited by his judicions remarks and by his interesting recitals of personal religious experience. None were more

I venerated him, not only on account of his acknowledged nety and kindness of heart, but there was something in his benignant countenance and placidity of manner that told of the surity of motive and rectitude of intention that dwelt within. I shall never forget a prayer that the Elder once made, nearly nineteen years ago. I think it must have been during the re ger to Consul Yanni, who presently came in, attited in his official costume, the most prominent part of which is his tall, black beaver ; and following him were his dragoman, kowneses, and others. By this ime it had got noised abroad what was going on, and the people began to crowd in to witness the proceedings. The room soon became full, and then they began to gather in the adjoining court outside. After some friendly, preliminary conversation, between the opposing parties, 'Mr. Yanni's secretary arose and read the following paper, which I translat entire, verbatim et literatum :
