How Farmers Lose Money. Mr. J. H. Bixby, of Royalton, Niagara county, N. Y., writes as follows to the Genesee Farmer : Looking only on the favorable side of any business, fits us poorly to engage in it under-standingly. The brightest prospect is liable to become clouded—the most hopeful scheme may end in disappointment.

If we look at the crops which "don't pay' among us, ten chances to one that the "root of the matter" lies in Water Stagnant in the Soil—which, in many ways, is prejudicial to the growth of crops. In fact, a soil which has no escape or outlet for the water which falls upon it, save by evaporation, can not be made to produce a paying crop. In a dry season, it is baked and hard; in a wet one, it is flooded by every slight rain, and is nev er in a condition very favorable to the growth of cultivated crops. When the crop is sown, it is at the mercy of the weather; a drouth is, if possible, more destructive than a flood; and, between the two, farmers lose money enough every three years, by stagnant water to apply the thorough remedy of draining.

Farmers lose money by short sighted and Mistaken Ideas of Economy, for true econemy does not consist in mere stinting and saving—it requires far-reaching views and a generous spirit, to decide practical questions up-on that just basis which secures the greatest measure of success. We must look further than the first cost. In farm stock, for instance, when once secured, it costs little more to raise, to any given age, a good animal than a bad one, while one may be far more remunerative than the other. The good cost more at first, but are sure to prove valuable and find ready purchasers, while the cheap are almost certain to be poor and dull of sale. This is true not only of animals, but far below others that have given everlasting credit,of all farm crops—the best varieties of grain no matter whether it is to Tom. Dick, or Harry. and fruits are sought and raised by truly economical cultivators of the soil.

Mismanagement of Manure. - The contents of the barn-yards are generally dignified with the name of manure, even if they consist of little more than rotten straw and animal ex-erement, the real atrength of which has leacher of erement in Montrose. ed away during its long exposure to the weather. "A dry yard" is the desideratum, with many; so all its juices are drained away into some stream, or down the road-side ditch; (into some provident neighbor's field it is to be hoped)-what is left is still "manure," and it is carted out for crops with expectation that they will be largely benefitted thereby. One thought will show how idle is this idea. By what does manure act beneficially upon vegetable growth? By its soluble constituents—they absorb only li-quids and gases as foods. This leached manure has lost the greatest share of soluble fertilizing matter, the residue is little more than a mechanical means of improving the Plowing too many Acres.-Very few farmers but can look back to the time when they "missed it" materially, in plowing for and putting in a crop imperfectly, unseason ably, or more of one than they could proper ly cultivate, or care for. The product did not begin to pay the expenses incurred, and the plow might far better have remained at rest. We must plow only half as much, and do it twice as well-then we shall find our barns better filled, our farms better stocked and our fields increasing in fertility.

Shelter for Stock.—Not only do horses need stables and care, but cows, sheep, and calves will do much better, give more milk, wool, and growth, on the same or less amount of food, than when no provision is made for their protection. The cost of shelter is far less than the cost of doing without, to say nothing of the convenience and compassion of cover; so don't let us fear a liberal expenditure for good barns, slieds, and stables with sheltered yards, and convenient watering places, though we may have long followed the make-do system of getting along with-

Exhibitions in Schools:- A memorial, Schools in New York city, has been present- Bonnets, ed to the Board of Education, showing the ill effects of the annual exhibition of the writing, drawing, and needle work of pupils of those schools. These teachers say, it is no just test of progress made in the branches thus attended to, that it results in injustice to the pupils, and that it draws disproportionate attention to these branches of study. Also, it causes estrangement, bitter feelings, and ungenerous rivalry among the teachers as well as among pupils. The memorial is strong against this display, and the ceremonies attending it. Good, indeed. The practice must prove injurious especially to children naturally endowed with large approbative-ness and small benevolence. There are higher motives than competition, holier feelings than rivalry with which to influence children Besides, the affections are a means of influence unequaled in potency; by these the teacher may sway the pupil according to his

None who are ignorant of this available power should be employed as teachers of children. The unexceptionable influence is the better. It is safe and sure. Use it teacher !- Life Illustrated.

The popular belief that young birds are assisted in escaping from the shell by the parent, is refuted by a talented author. The beak of the chicken is tipped with a bony point; this is protruded through the shell, and afterwards drops off. By means of its feet as levers, the young bird turns itself little by little, till by degrees the whole top of the large end of the egg is cut cleanly off. and thus the prisoner is set free .- Scientific and that he is prepared to supply the wants of the community in that line at unusually low prices. He flatters himself that his facilities for manufacturing his own Wares, Stoves, &c., give him a decided advantage over any who purchase and transport at a heavy expense their entire stock.

He would say to those who wish to purchase STOVES of any description, STOVE PIPE, or TRIMMINGS, of any kind, and pay for them, he is prepared to live them great bargains but to those who want to purchase on a year's credit and then let it im two years more, he had rather they would call on some one else, even if they have to pay seventy-five per cent more than an article is worth.
