She left the palms of Palestine To sit beneath the Norland pine. She sang the musky Orient strains Where Winter swent the spare Winter swept the snowy plains Their natures met like night and morn The child that from their meetings grew-Hung, like that star, between the two. The glossy night his mother shed. From her long hair, was on his head; But in its shade they saw arise The morning of his father's eyes. Beneath the Orient's tawny stain Beneath the Northern force was seen The Arab sense, alert and keen. His were the Viking's sinewy hands, The arching foot of Eastern lands, And in his soul conflicting strove Northern indifference, Southern love; The chastity of temperate blood, Impetuous passion's fiery flood; The settled faith that nothing shakes, The jealousy a breath awakes; The planning reason's sober gaze, Aud Pancy's meteoric blaze. And stronger, as he grew to man, The contradicting natures ran-As mingled streams from Etna flow, One born of fire, and one of snow : And one impelled, and one withheld, And one obeyed, and one rebelled; One gave him force, the other fire, This, self-control; and that, desire. One filled his heart with fierce unrest; With peace serene the other blessed. He knew the depth and knew the height, The bounds of darkness and of light; And who these far extremes has seen, Must needs know all that lies between. So, with untaught, instinctive art. He read the myriad-natured heart. He met the men of many a land; They gave their souls into his hand; And none of them was long unknown: The hardest lesson was his own. But how he lived, and where, and when, For, as a fountain disappears, To gush again in later years. So nature lost;again may rise After the lapse of centuries-May track the hidden course of blood Till, on some unexpected field, The latent lineage is revealed. The hearts that mot in Palestine,
And mingled neath the Norland pine,
Still heat with double pulse in MINK.

"The Eagle Nest of the Republic."

Such is the lofty title that a writer in the February number of the Democratic Age, gives to the sober State of Connecticut, and in the progress of an enthusiastic story relates this illustrative incident. "A number of years ago, happening to be in Paris on the Fourth of July, with many other Americans, we agreed to celebrate the day hy a digner at the Hotel Maurice. There were seventy-two of us in all. We had but one guest.— This was M. DeTocqueville, who had then rendered himself famous by his great work upon Democracy in America. During the festivities of the evening, after the cloth, had been removed, and speechifying had com-menced, some gentleman alluded en passant to the fact that he was born in Connection.
