But, 'tis a thing in law quite rare—
Against the "claim" which he had laid
No showing of "defence" she made.

She had invaded his "domain"trespass on the case" quite plain-And, to repair the damaged part, He asked the "payment" of her heart. But, the "hearing" being a private one—And we not there to see the fram—Of course we cannot tell you all Which to the "parties" did befal. Sufficient, if this "fact" we reach,
That when he made his "maiden speech
The maiden "satisfied the claim"
By yielding both her keart and name. Long live the lawyer and his bride, In all their "courts" may peace preside Their " pains and penalties" be "brief," And the Law of Love be theirs "in chief."
